LADIES' NIGHT AT C. M. A.

Men's Club Holds Annual Guest Night with Extra Large Number Present.

In spite of the extreme cold of Wednesday evening, an extra large number of members of the C. M. A. Men's club with their lady friends gathered in the association building in East Weymouth to help make the annual ladies' night one of the greatest successes in the club's history. About 225 sat down to supper at 6.30 o'clock. The menu consisted of roast lamb, baked potatoes, squash, cold slaw, cocoa, ice cream, lady fingers, macaroons, apples and candy. Mr. and Mrs. Hosea D. Farrar were in charge of the repast and every detail was carefully taken care of by those able caterers. Messrs. Condrick, Talbot, Rees, Bates, Gorman, Curran, Palmer, Clark, Vender, Locke and Warren were the waiters.

At the conclusion of the supper the audience was entertained with a most interesting illustrated lecture on "Japan and the Japanese," by T. Phillip Terry Esq. of Hingham, who resided in Japan for 12 years.

ANNUAL DANCING SCHOOL RECEPTION.

Large Crowd Witnesses Pleasing Program of Special and Original Dances in Odd Fellows Opera House, East Weymouth, Last Friday Evening.

One of the prettiest and most interesting children's events in town each year in March is the annual reception and ball of Mrs. Louise Merritt Polley's young people's dancing class. The annual affair took place this year on Friday night last in the Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth and a large number of relatives and friends of the many young ladies and young gentlemen were in attendance to applaud the many fine special and original numbers given by their young favorites of the dancing art.

The evening's program opened with the annual grand march, led this year by Master Addison Dingwall of North Weymouth with Miss Irma Nash of Weymouth Landing. Master Dingwall and Miss Nash were followed by about fifty couple and the scene was the several lines of the march were carried out by the young people was indeed a very pretty one.

After the march and circle the entire class enjoyed a one-step and a caprice. Next the Misses Nash and Dasha gave a pleasing number garbed as "Franco American Soups."

"The Crimson" a new dance, by the class next entertained the gathering, followed by the gypsy-mazurka. After this, dainty, petite little Miss Esther Leonard with the Misses Vinling, Gay, Page, Mills, Sterling, Eldridge, Linnehan, White, Manuel, Nash, Wing, and Linton presented the glide eccentric in a delightful manner and they were well rewarded for their efforts by the long round of applause they received from the appreciative audience.

The class followed this feature with the lulu-fado and the fox-trot and then Miss Leonard ably stepped a ballet number in her ever present grace and charm.

As Miss Mae Allen, who had presided at the piano for the class all the evening, was now dressing for her special number, the victrola was started and the entire class enjoyed the hesitation waltz.

The closing number was perhaps the most interesting exhibition of new and old time dancing given in town for some time. Miss Mae Allen with Morrill Allen in their ever popular and up-to-date way, cleverly danced the 1915 Polana and followed this with the 1615 Gavotte. They were in complete costume representing the time of the dance they performed and the presentation will long be remembered by the large crowd, that highly applauded the act at its close.

The matrons were Mrs. J. Herbert Libby and Mrs. Fred Alden, while Miss Leona Breach, Miss Elsie Munroe, Miss Margaret Dingwall, Miss May Allen, Ernest Mowry and Harold Breach acted as ushers. Mrs. Polley was presented with a beautiful bouquet of pink from the members of the class, while Miss Allen, who has played the piano at each lesson during the winter, was the recipient of a large bunch of daffodils. Miss Marion Nash made the presentations in behalf of the class.

At intermission refreshments of fancy ices were served. The closing feature was dancing by all present. Richard's orchestra furnished music.

W. R. C. Notes.

The Thursday evening meeting of W. R. C., 102, was largely attended, and much enthusiasm is manifested in the work, the attendance growing larger. Two candidates were initiated and several applications received. Just at present a large amount of work is being done to raise money for relief work.

Tuesday, March 9th, the regular meeting will be held, and at 6.30 a supper, to which the comrades are cordially welcome. A short, interesting entertainment is planned for the evening.

The good of the order committee, Mrs. Harriet D. Litchfield, chairman, has work well arranged, and much interest is manifested. A meeting of the South Weymouth committee was held with Miss Alice Derby on Tuesday afternoon, and much work accomplished.

The birth month committee held a food sale last Friday at the office of A. S. Jordan & Co., and it was well patronized.

The regular meeting of Thursday evening, March 25th, will be postponed until Tuesday afternoon, March 30th. A home supper will be served at 6.30, followed in the evening by an observance of Red Letter Day and reception to Department Inspector Mrs. Carrie F. Loring.

ON THE FARM

Read this column and you can have it delivered at your house with something new every week for a full year by sending $2.00 to this office now.

A colt appreciates the companionship of man, and he should have it especially during the first year of his life.

There are as great chances of developing specialties in the country on the farm as anywhere else. Many farmers have specialties and have made fame and fortunes from them. This is true of farmers in our country and in foreign countries.

A good method of preserving plants that have been transplanted and before their roots have taken hold of the ground is to cover them with inverted flower pots of suitable size. These should be in place only during the warmest and sunniest part of the day. They should not be used on dull days.

The killing of fruit buds by late spring frosts is a phenomenon by itself and can be met by special means. The commonest of these are whitewashing, smudging and heating from oil pots, of which the last named is distinctly the best.—Country Gentleman.

In seeding permanent pastures, use a variety of seed to secure grasses that mature and grow at different times of the summer and fall. Redtop is a good mid-summer grass, while Kentucky blue grass is good early in the spring and makes a second growth in the fall.

Soils may become acid in two ways: The first is by the leaching out of the original lime salts by continued rains and erosion. The second, not very frequent, by too much humus, or fresh green vegetation souring in it. This last is the reason that swampy land is so sour and needs potash.

The proper amount of feed for a hen is in the minds of many an all-absorbing question. It is not always expedient to follow ironclad rules, because it is believed that hen's appetites vary, that they will eat more some days than others, depending perhaps upon the weather conditions, their physical welfare, their productivity and other factors.

For eggs to possess potency for good hatching the breeding stock must be healthy, in good tone and well nourished. They must be breeding birds of vigor and stamina. Vigor in the young chicks implies vigor of the parents. Nothing is of more importance in securing hatches that will turn out well as extreme vigor with the flock of breeding birds. This must be true of both the males and the females.

Natural seeding is too often uncertain, because the necessary conditions for germination are perfect only by chance, and where the farmer's purpose is to produce useful timber without loss of time natural seeding is not to be depended on. Direct planting of sufficiently advanced nursery stock has the advantage over natural seeding of establishing more quickly and with greater certainty only such timber trees as are wanted.

Eggs that must be held for several days or a week or more for setting hens or filling the incubator must be kept in a mild room where they will not be chilled or overheated. They must not be held in a cold corner of the kitchen nor on a high shelf near the kitchen stove, where they will be cooked at one period of the day and half frozen at night. Both excessive heat and cold tend to injure the germs.

Now the successful farmer, the man who reaches the limit of his ground's production in his efforts to produce a bountiful crop, aids the soil, either good or bad, with a treatment of a good grade of fertilizer. Manureal fertilization is splendid, so far as it goes, but the demands, or rather the requirements, of the farmers of the land for fertilizer exhaust the manure supply so quickly that they turn to prepared fertilizers, which are equally as good, readily procurable and easily handled. The results are satisfactory, and the practice is now established.

The way to raise things is to get fertility, and the way to get fertility is to raise things. Let us become seasick in the whirl of this idea let us hasten to elucidate. The first thing to do with a worn or tired soil is to get plants to grow on it. The way to do this is to feed them by putting available food where the roots can find and use it. These plants will in turn put fertility into the soil, some of them better than others, but all will do it if they are allowed to remain in or on the land. So get fertility in sacks, in barrels or anywhere. With that fertility get plants, and with those plants get more fertility. This is a primary lesson, but some who are called wise men have not learned it.

On many farms both early and late potatoes are grown in truck patches or in the field, and seldom in the garden. As a rule it is better to grow the main planting of potatoes outside of the garden, yet it is well to have a few rows in the garden for extra early use. Early varieties of potatoes can be had extra early for home table use by handing them in the right way. They should be planted in the warmest and driest soil of the garden just as soon as frost is out of the ground.

Since the garden is more heavily fertilized than the fields of the farm it contains more decomposing organic matter, hence it is several degrees warmer than ordinary field soil. Sweet corn, for example, for table use, can be safely planted in a good garden from a week to two or three weeks before the field corn is planted. The garden soil is warmer and hence the more tender plants will grow at a time when they would not grow well in an open field, the soil of which contains less humus.

He Was She.

In a college for women where the faculty consists chiefly of the gentler sex a meeting of the academic council was in progress. Here and there a lone man sat surrounded by learned ladies. An amendment had just been proposed.

"Where is the person who offers this amendment?" inquired the president.

"Who is she?"

Whereupon Mr. Skeets, the popular young professor of a favorite subject, rose and replied deprecatingly, "I am she."—New York Post.

Promotion.

"And what," asked the cannibal chieftain, in his kindest tones, "was your business before you were captured by my men?"

"I was a newspaper man," answered the captive.

"An editor?"

"No; merely a subeditor."

"Cheer up, young man! Shortly after my chief has finished his perusal of the cookery book you will be editor in chief."—London Answers.

Shopworn Goods Barred.

"That's a very handsome painting," said the visitor to the home of opulence. "Is it by one of the old masters?"

"I should say not," responded Mrs. Newrich indignantly. "Why, that picture is in the very latest style."—Richmond Times Dispatch.

Cynical.

When we hear a man say that he would rather have a clear conscience than a million pounds we are reminded of what David said all men were.—London Standard.

A kiss in time saves trouble.—London Standard.

Took the Hint.

A wearied young lady hastened the departure of a tedious caller by remarking as she looked out of the window, "I think we are going to have a beautiful sunrise."

TEST OF A TOASTMASTER.

His Speech, Whether It Be Good or Bad, Should Be Very Brief.

To the average man an invitation to "make a few remarks" after dinner is at once a terror and a secret pride. To be asked to be the toastmaster at a big dinner is usually taken as recognition of wit and knowledge.

The toastmaster's speech should be very brief. If he is a good speaker himself a speech of any considerable length imposes unfair competition upon the real speakers, usually visiting guests, whom he is to introduce. If the toastmaster is a poor speaker he bores the audience and the waiting guests as well. And in any event every minute occupied by the toastmaster is a robbery of the time of the real speakers of the evening, and an after dinner speaker may have a real message that needs delivery, and the long drawn introduction, with side lights and anecdotes, will really cheat the audience of something worth while.

The toastmaster has a task of courtesy—to prepare the diners for the man who is to speak, to tame and train the audience into a proper frame of mind and to turn it over to the speaker informed as to his identity, prejudiced in his favor a little perhaps, but certainly not in the reaction following a laugh raised by the toastmaster.—Boston Globe.

CHAPTER XIX. A Flutter in Eggs.

It was in the A. C. company's big store at Dawson that Lucille Arral beckoned Smoke Bellew over to the dry goods counter.

Smoke obeyed her call with alacrity. The man did not exist in Dawson who would not have been flattered by the notice of Lucille Arral, the singing soubrette of the tiny stock company that performed nightly at the Palace Opera House.

"Things are dead," she complained, with pretty petulance. "There hasn't been a stampede for a week. There's no dust in circulation. There's always standing room now at the opera house. And there hasn't been a mail from the outside for two whole weeks. In short, this burg has crawled into its cave and gone to sleep. We've got to do something. It needs livening, and you and I can do it. I've broken with Wild Water, you know."

Smoke caught two almost simultaneous visions. One was of Joy Gastell, the other was of himself, in the midst of a bleak snow stretch under a cold arctic moon, being pot shotted with accurateness and dispatch by the aforesaid Wild Water. Smoke's reluctance at raising excitement with the aid of Lucille Arral was too potent for her to miss.

"I'm not thinking what you are thinking at all, thank you," she chided, with a laugh and a pout. "Take it from me, Mr. Smoke Bellew, I'm not going to make love to you, and if you dare to make love to me Wild Water will take care of your case. You know him. Besides, I—I haven't really broken with him. Wild Water thinks I've broken with him, don't you see?"

"Well, have you, or haven't you?" "I haven't—there! But it's between you and me in confidence."

"Where do I come in, stalking horse or fall guy?"

"Neither. You make a pot of money, we put across the laugh on Wild Water and cheer Dawson up, and best of all and the reason for it all, he gets disciplined. He needs it. He's—well, the best way to put it is he's too turbulent. He broke out last night again. Sowed the floor of the M. & M. with gold dust—all of a thousand dollars. You've heard of it, of course."

"Yes; this morning. But still I don't get you."

"Listen. He was too turbulent. I broke our engagement, and he's going around making a noise like a broken heart. Now we come to it. I like eggs."

"But what have eggs and appetite got to do with it?" Smoke demanded.

"Everything. I like eggs. There's only a limited supply of eggs in Dawson."

"Sure. Slavovitch's restaurant has most of them. Ham and one egg, $3; ham and two eggs, $5. That means $2 an egg, retail."

"He likes eggs too," she continued.

"But that's not the point. I like them. I have breakfast every morning at 11 o'clock at Slavovitch's. I invariably eat two eggs." She paused impressively. "Suppose, just suppose, somebody corners eggs."

"She waited, and Smoke regarded her with admiring eyes, while in his heart he backed with approval Wild Water's choice of her."

"You're not following," she said.

"Go on," he replied. "I give up. What's the answer?"

"Stupid! You know Wild Water. When he sees I'm languishing for eggs, and I know his mind like a book and I know how to languish, what will he do? Why, he'll just start stampeding for the man that's got the corner in eggs. He'll buy the corner, no matter what it costs."

"Picture: I come into Slavovitch's at 11 o'clock. Wild Water will be at the next table. He'll make it his business to be there. 'Two eggs, shirred,' I'll say to the waiter. 'Sorry, Miss Arral, the waiter will say, 'they ain't no more eggs.' Then on speaks Wild Water in that big bear voice of his. 'Waiter, six eggs, soft boiled.' And the waiter says, 'Yes, sir, and the eggs are brought. Picture: Wild Water looks sideways at me, and I look like a particularly indignant icicle and summon the waiter. 'Sorry, Miss Arral,' he says, 'but them eggs is Mr. Wild Water's. You see, miss, he owns 'em.' Picture: Wild Water, triumphant, doing his best to look unconscious while he eats his six eggs."

"Another picture: Slavovitch himself bringing two shirred eggs to me and saying: 'Compliments of Mr. Wild Water, miss.' What can I do? What can I possibly do but smile at Wild Water? And then we make up, of course, and he'll consider it cheap if he has been compelled to pay $10 for each and every egg in the corner."

"Go on, go on!" Smoke urged. "At what station do I climb on to the choo-choo cars or at what water tank do I get thrown off?"

"Ninny! You make that corner in eggs. You start in immediately, to-day. You can buy every egg in Dawson for $3 and sell out to Wild Water at almost any advance. And then, afterward, we'll let the inside history come out. The laugh will be on Wild Water. His turbulence will be some subdued. You and I share the glory of it. You make a pile of money, and Dawson wakes up with a grand ha-ha!"

"Hey, Shorty!" Smoke called across the main street to his partner and crossed over. "I want you to do me a favor."

"Sure," Shorty said gallantly. "What is it? Let her rip."

"I want you to buy eggs for me—"

"Sure, an' Floridy water an' talcum powder, if you say the word. Look here, Smoke, if you want to go in for high livin' you go an' buy your own eggs."

"I am going to buy, but I want you to help me to buy. You go right straight to Slavovitch's. Pay as high as $3, but buy all he's got."

"Three dollars!" Shorty groaned.

"An' I heard tell only yesterday that he's got all of 700 in stock! Twenty-one hundred dollars for hen fruit. Say, Smoke, I'd sure do anything for you. If you had a cold in the head an' was layin' with both arms broke I'd set by your bedside day an' night an' wipe your nose for you, but I'll be everlastingly d-d if I'll squander twenty-one hundred good iron dollars on hen fruit for you or any other two-legged man."

"They're not your dollars, but mine. Shorty, it's a deal I have on. What I'm after is to corner every blessed egg in Dawson, in the Klondike, on the Yukon. You've got to help me out. I haven't the time to tell you of the inwardness of the deal. I will afterward and let you go half on it if you want to. But the thing right now is to get the eggs. Now, you hustle up to Slavovitch's and buy all he's got. And then keep on. Nose out every egg in Dawson and buy it. Understand? Buy it!"

Never was a market cornered more quickly. In three days every known egg in Dawson with the exception of several dozen was in the hands of Smoke and Shorty.

The several dozen not yet gathered in were in the hands of two persons. One, with whom Shorty was dealing, was an Indian woman who lived in a cabin on the hill back of the hospital.

"I'll get her today," Shorty announced next morning. "I'll be back in a jiffy. If I don't bust myself a-shovin' dust at her."

In the afternoon when Smoke returned to the cabin he found Shorty.

"What luck?" Shorty asked carelessly after several minutes had passed.

"Nothing doing," Smoke answered.

"How did you get on with the squaw?" Shorty cocked his head triumphant toward a tin pall of eggs on the table.

"Seven dollars a clatter, though," he confessed.

"I offered $10 finally," Smoke said, "and then the fellow told me he'd already sold his eggs. Now that looks bad, Shorty. Somebody else is in the market. Those twenty-eight eggs are liable to cause us trouble. You see, the success of the corner consists in holding every last—"

He broke off to stare at his partner. A pronounced change was coming over Shorty—one of agitation masked by extreme deliberation.

"Do you mind kindly just repeatin' over how many eggs you said the man didn't sell to you?" he asked.

"Twenty-eight."

"Hum!" Shorty commended to him self. "They's just exactly, precisely nor nothin' more or anything less'n twenty-eight eggs in that there pall settin' on the table, an' they cost, every dinged last one of 'em, just exactly seven great big round iron dollars a throw. If you stand in cryin' need of any further items of information I'm willin' and free to impart."

"Go on," Smoke requested.

"Well, that geezer you was dickerin' with is a big buck Indian. Am I right?"

Smoke nodded and continued to nod to each question.

"He's got one cheek half gone, where a bald face grizzly swatted him. Am I right? He's a dog trader—right, eh? His name is Scar Face Jim. That's so, ain't it? D'y'e get my drift?"

"You mean we've been bidding?"—

"Against each other? Sure thing. That squaw's his wife, an' they keep house on the hill back of the hospital. I could 'a' got them eggs for two a throw if you hadn't butted in."

"And so could I," Smoke laughed. "If you'd kept out. But it doesn't amount to anything. We know that we've got the corner. That's the big thing."

Shorty spent the next hour wrestling with a stub of a pencil on the margin of a three-year-old newspaper.

"There she stands," he said at last. "Lemme give you the totals. You an' me has right now in our possession exactly 973 eggs. They costs us exactly $2,700. If we stick up Wild Water for $10 an egg we stand to win, clean net an' all to the good, just exactly $6,970."

At 11 that night Smoke was routed from sound sleep by Shorty.

"I just seen Slavovitch. He says to me: 'Shorty, I want to speak to you about them eggs. I've kept it quiet. Nobody knows I sold 'em to you. But if you're speculatin' I can put you wise to a good thing.' An' he did, too, Smoke."

"Well, maybe it sounds incredible, but that good thing was Wild Water Charley. He's lookin' to buy eggs. He goes around to Slavovitch an' offers him $5 an egg, an' before he quits he's offerin' $8. An' Slavovitch ain't got no eggs. Last thing Wild Water says to Slavovitch is that he'll bent the head offen him if he ever bends out Slavovitch has eggs cached away somewhere. Slavovitch had to tell 'm he'd sold the eggs, but that the buyer was secret."

"Slavovitch says to let him say the word to Wild Water, who's got the eggs. 'Shorty,' he says to me, 'Wild Water'll come a-runnin'. You can hold him up for $8. 'Eight dollars your grandmother, I says. 'He'll fall for $10 before I'm done with him.' Any way, I told Slavovitch I'd think it over and let him know in the mornin'."

Of course we'll let 'm pass the word on to Wild Water. Am I right?"

"You certainly are, Shorty. First thing in the mornin' tip-off Slavovitch. Have him tell Wild Water that you and I are partners in the deal."

In the morning Smoke chanced upon Lucille Arral again at the dry goods counter of the A. C. store.

"It's workin'!" Wild Water's been around to Slavovitch, trying to buy or bully eggs out of him. And by this time Slavovitch has told him that Shorty and I own the corner."

Lucille Arral's eyes sparkled with delight. "I'm going to breakfast right now," she cried. "And I'll ask the waiter for eggs and be so plaintive when there aren't any as to melt a heart of stone. And you know Wild Water's heart is anything but stone. He'll buy the corner if it costs him one of his mines. Hold out for a stiff figure. Nothing less than $10 will satisfy me, and if you sell for anything less, Smoke, I'll never forgive you."

That noon, up in their cabin, Shorty placed on the table a pot of beans, a pot of coffee, a smoking platter of moose meat and bacon, a plate of stewed dried peaches and called. "Grab 'em ready!"

Smoke opened the door for a breath of frosty air and saw something that made him close the door hurriedly and dash to the stove. The frying pan, still hot from the moose meat and bacon, he put back on the front lid. Into the frying pan he put a generous dab of butter, then reached for an egg, which he broke and dropped spluttering into the pan. As he reached for a second egg Shorty gained his side and clutched his arm in an excited grip.

"Hey, what you doin'?" he demanded. "Frying eggs," Smoke informed him, breaking the second one and throwing off Shorty's detaining hand. "Get out

Weymouth Gazette

Entered in the Post Office at Weymouth, Mass., as Second Class Matter

FRIDAY, MARCH 5, 1915

The somewhat heated and long drawn out term of Congress came to an end last night and members are relieved of the intense strain. Our junior senator, Hon. John W. Weeks, has been very much in the limelight and can now take a little rest among his friends, from whom and the Nation at large, he is receiving many congratulations for his noble fight and victory, won in his masterly handling of the celebrated "Shipping Bill."

The election of Town Officers for the year 1915 is over, and while in one instance there was something of a contest, as a whole the campaign, so far as town officers was concerned has been a remarkably quiet one all along the line, and people having business to do in any of the departments will meet the same familiar faces, which fact shows that the people as a whole think their officers are worthy of the position, and no doubt will continue to work for the best interests of the Town of Weymouth.

The license question had a good share of agitation and faithful workers at hand on the right side, and the result of the ballot continues Weymouth as a no-license town with an increased majority on the no license side. There remains, however, one precinct to bring over in order to make the vote more unanimous.

We were born in Weymouth have lived here a good many years and hope to remain several years more. We have always tried to promote its best interests in social and business life. We like to see the wheels of industry go round in our factories and mills. We like to see the clerks in our stores busy. We believe in promoting Home Trade. In looking over our exchanges we find that the same feeling we have for Weymouth is felt by men of other towns for their particular municipality and the following is taken from our friend, William White's Mansfield News, but take the liberty to substitute Weymouth for Mansfield:

THE HOME MERCHANT.

The home merchant. Who is he?

He is the chap who gives you credit when you are financially broke, and carries your account until you are able to pay.

He is the chap who gives you back your money or makes exchanges when you are not satisfied with what you have bought.

He is the chap who stands behind his guaranty, and makes restoration of all losses that you may sustain on the goods you buy.

He is the chap who meets you at the door with a handshake, and lets you out with a message to the "kids," and a real come-again goodbye.

He is the chap who meets and greets you on the street every day in the year, and takes a neighborly interest in your family and your affairs.

He is the chap whose clerks and book-keepers and other employees live in Weymouth and spend their money with you and other Weymouth people.

He is the chap who pays heavy taxes, to help support Weymouth schools, and build Weymouth streets, and maintain Weymouth fire department and police department and lighting and water service.

He is the chap who helps support Weymouth churches and charity organizations and Weymouth lodges and commercial clubs, and talks for Weymouth and boosts for Weymouth every day in the year.

He is the chap who visits you when you are sick, sends flowers to your family when you die, and follows your body out among the trees and tombs, as far as human feet may travel with the dead.

He is the home merchant—your neighbor—your friend—your helper in times of need.

Don't you think you ought to trade with him, and be his friend and his helper in the time of his need?

Don't you know that every dollar that you send out of Weymouth for merchandise, is sent to strangers—to men who never spend a dollar in Weymouth.

Weymouth Board of Trade.

The Board of Trade held a well attended open meeting in G. A. R. hall Tuesday night for the purpose of discussing the warrant for the Town Meeting of next Monday.

E. W. Hunt of the executive committee was chosen chairman and all parts of the town were well represented in the assembly.

Article 10, for the support of public schools and transportation of pupils, took a good bit of time and the transportation system as now in vogue was somewhat criticised and the echo of it may be looked for at the town meeting on Monday.

The article in regard to a new school building in Ward 3 was another one quite well ventilated and the general conclusion was that more and better school accommodations must be furnished but no definite plan for relieving the situation developed.

New England's Pride.

Out of the scanty resources the good old "pilgrim mothers" found on the bleak shores of the new country, finally came the famous "New England boiled dinners," and all the expert cooks of two intervening centuries have not been able to improve on the cooking of those pioneers.

Know Paint.

There's a paint-education in this advertisement.

Buy by the job, not gallon. Buy by the paint put-on; that's the job.

The price of paint is so much a gallon; that can't be helped, but amounts to nothing.

The price of painting is so much a day; that can't be helped, but amounts to nothing.

Put them together. How can you do it? You've got to or lose perhaps half of your money.

Devoe, 10 gallons enough for the average job; an average paint, 15. Now reckon your costs. Count labor a day for a gallon. Devoe 10 days; the other 15.

Devoe about $50; the average paint about $70 or $80; the dearer the labor the bigger the difference, always that way.

But that's for the job. How long is it going to last? One twice as long as the other.

DEVOE

Chorcello Expert Gets Scare.

An amusing incident happened at the new Royal theatre, Wednesday night in which a young man was scared for a few moments.

Ralph D. Flint of East Weymouth, who installed the electrical instrument which is to furnish special music at this new house, finished tuning and voicing the instrument about 11.30 p. m. and proceeded to test his work by playing selections varying from the sweet and low tones, up to the sonorous type. He stopped playing for a few moments, and a strapping policeman opened the side door and demanded in a deep, bass voice "What kind of a thing is that you have been playing?"

The expert thought he had broken some blue law of the city by producing music at this time of night, and began to apologize and explain how he was unused to the ordinances of Worcester and how sorry he was that he had broken any laws.

The good natured officer laughed heartily and said, "My boy, you have broken no laws. I heard the music a block away and it was so different from anything that I ever heard before, that I wanted to know what sort of an instrument it was."

The crowd joined in the laugh on the expert and he "made good" by playing selections for the benefit of the officer who had "got his goat."

NO DIFFERENCE.

The Proof is Here the Same as Everywhere.

For those who seek relief from kidney backache, weak kidneys, bladder ills, Doan's Kidney Pills offer hope of relief and the proof is here in Weymouth, the same as everywhere. Weymouth people have used Doan's and Weymouth people recommend Doan's, the kidney remedy used in America for fifty years. Why suffer? Why run the risk of dangerous kidney ills—fatal Bright's disease. Here's Weymouth proof. Investigate it.

Alfred Howe, 177 Commercial street, Weymouth, says: "I had severe pains across my back. The passages of the kidney secretions were scanty and painful. A neighbor recommended Doan's Kidney Pills and I began taking them. One box made a great improvement. The passages of the kidney secretions became regular, the pains in my back disappeared. Four boxes rid me of the trouble. I am never without Doan's Kidney Pills in the house, and don't believe I would be alive today if it hadn't been for them. You may continue to use my former endorsement of this remedy."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Howe had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

UNIVERSALIST EVANGELISM

The Universalists of Massachusetts are engaged in a campaign of State Wide Evangelism, undirection of the State Superintendent and the Missions Committee. It is a sign of the times that in most cases the emphasis has been put upon the social and community aspects of liberal Christianity. The sermons usually set forth the attitude of liberal Christians toward the problems of modern life.

In connection with these services many thousands of pieces of literature are being distributed through the mails and from house to house.

The Second church, Columbian square, South Weymouth, enters this campaign of Universalist Evangelism, the week after next, having announced Monday, March 8 to Friday, March 13 as "Universalist Week."

Monday, March 8 will be the open meeting of the Jane F. Clark Mission circle with a lecture by J. B. Bisbee upon the work of the Grenfell Mission in Labrador; Mr. Bisbee spent a year in this work.

Now is the Time to Swat the Fly.

Uncle Sam is waging a relentless war on the deadly house fly and in a late bulletin prepared by the Department of Agriculture, valuable information is given on the best means of combating this deadly pest. The most effective way of exterminating the fly, according to the bulletin, is to eradicate his breeding places. The breeding season of the fly begins early in March and continues throughout the spring and summer months. All dirt should be removed from the premises, stables cleaned and decaying vegetables destroyed.

The fly has rightly been called the undertaker's traveling salesman, and in addition to his regular line of "typhoid bugs," he carries a side line of tuberculosis, Asiatic Cholera and other disease germs. Now is the time to "swat the fly."

of the way, Shorty. Wild Water's coming up the hill, and he'll be here in five minutes."

Shorty sat down at the table. By the time the expected knock came at the door Smoke was facing him across the table, and before each was a plate containing three hot fried eggs.

"Come in!" Smoke called.

Wild Water Charley, a strapping young giant, entered and shook hands. "Set down an' have a bite, Wild Water," Shorty invited. "Smoke, fry him some eggs. I'll bet he ain't scooped an egg in a coon's age."

Smoke broke three more eggs into the hot pan and in several minutes placed them before his guest, who looked at them with so strange and strained an expression that Shorty confessed afterward his fear that Wild Water would slip them into his pocket and carry them away.

"Say, them smells down in the states ain't got nothin' over us in the matter of eats," Shorty gouted. "Here's you an' me an' Smoke gettin' outside $300 worth of eggs an' not battin' an eye."

Wild Water stared at the rapidly disappearing eggs and seemed petrified.

"They—they ain't worth no $10," Wild Water said slowly.

Shorty accepted the challenge. "A thing's worth what you can get for it, ain't it?" he demanded.

"Yes, but you can't eat eggs like that," Wild Water objected. "It—it ain't right."

"We just dote on eggs, Smoke an' me," was Shorty's excuse.

Wild Water finished his own plate in a half hearted way. "Say, you fellows can do a great favor," he began tentatively. "Sell me, or lend me, or give me, about a dozen of them eggs."

"Sure," Smoke answered. "I know what a yearning for eggs is myself. But we're not so poor that we have to sell our hospitality. They'll cost you nothing. Go ahead, Shorty. Cook them up for him."

But Wild Water laid a restraining hand on the eager Shorty as he explained. "I don't mean cooked. I want them with the shells on."

"So that you can carry 'em away?" "That's the idea."

"But that ain't hospitality," Shorty objected. "It's—It's tradin'."

Smoke nodded concurrence. "That's different, Wild Water. I thought you just wanted to eat them. You see, we went into this for a speculation."

The dangerous blue of Wild Water's eyes began to grow more dangerous. "I'll pay you for them," he said sharply. "How much?"

"Oh, not a dozen," Smoke replied. "We couldn't sell a dozen. We're not retailers; we're speculators. We can't break our own market. We've got a hard and fast corner, and when we sell out it's the whole corner or nothing."

"How many have you got and how much do you want for them?"

"How many have we, Shorty?" Smoke inquired.

Shorty cleared his throat and performed mental arithmetic aloud. "Lemme see. Nine hundred an' seventy-three minus nine, that leaves nine hundred an' sixty-two. An' the whole shootin' match at $10 a throw will tote up just about nine thousand six hundred an' twenty iron dollars. Of course, Wild Water, we're playin' fair, an' it's money back for bad ones, though they ain't none. That's one thing I never seen in the Klondike—a bad egg."

Wild Water shook his head sadly and helped himself to the beans. "That would be too expensive, Shorty. I only want a few. I'll give you $10 for a couple of dozen. I'll give you $20, but I can't buy 'em all."

"All or none," was Smoke's ultimatum.

"Look here, you two," Wild Water said in a burst of confidence. "I'll be perfectly honest with you, an' don't let it go any further. You know Miss Arral an' I was engaged. Well, she's broken everything off. It's for her I want them eggs. I want to give them to her on a platter shirred. That's the way she likes 'em."

"Do you want 'em ninety-six hundred an' twenty dollars' worth?" Shorty queried.

"Aw, listen to reason," Wild Water pleaded. "I only want a couple of dozen. I'll give you $20 apiece for 'em. What do I want with all the rest of them eggs?"

"I should say Miss Arral's worth the price of the eggs," Smoke put in quietly.

"Worth it?" Wild Water stood up in the heat of his eloquence. "She's worth a million dollars. She's worth all the dust in Klondike. But that ain't no call for me to gamble $10,000 on a breakfast for her. Now, I've got a proposition. Lend me a couple of dozen of them eggs. I'll turn 'em over to Slavovitch. He'll feed 'em to her with my compliments. She ain't smiled to me for a hundred years. If them eggs get a smile for me I'll take the whole boiling off your hands."

"Will you sign a contract to that effect?" Smoke said quickly, for he knew that Lucille Arral had agreed to smile. Wild Water gasped. "You're almighty swift with business up here on the hill," he said, with a hint of a snarl. "We're only accepting your own proposition," Smoke answered.

"All right, bring on the paper; make it out hard and fast," Wild Water cried in the anger of surrender.

CHAPTER XX. Four Years Old.

SMOKE wrote the document, wherein Wild Water agreed to take every egg delivered to him at $10 per egg, provided that the two dozen advanced to him brought about a reconciliation with Lucille Arral.

Wild Water paused with uplifted pen as he was about to sign. "Hold on," he said. "When I buy eggs I buy good eggs. If I find one bad egg you've got to come back with the $10 I paid for it."

"That's all right," Smoke placated. "It's only fair."

Smoke inserted the word "good" in the contract, and Wild Water sullenly signed, received the trial two dozen in a tin pail, pulled on his mittens and opened the door.

"Goodby, you robbers," he growled back at them and slammed the door.

Smoke was a witness to the play next morning at Slavovitch's. He sat, as Wild Water's guest, at the table adjoining Lucille Arral's. Almost to the letter, as she had forecast it, did the scene come off.

"Haven't you found any eggs yet?" she murmured plaintively to the waiter. "No, ma'am," came the answer. "They say somebody's cornered every egg in Dawson. Mr. Slavovitch is trying to buy a few just especially for you. But the fellow that's got the corner won't let loose."

It was at this juncture that Wild Water beckoned the proprietor to him, and, with one hand on his shoulder, drew his head down. "Look here, Slavovitch," Wild Water whispered hoarsely. "I turned over a couple of dozen eggs to you last night. Where are they?"

"In the safe, all but that six I have all thawed and ready for you any time you sing out."

"I don't want 'em for myself," Wild Water breathed in a still lower voice. "Shirre 'em up and present 'em to Miss Arral there."

"I'll attend to it personally myself," Slavovitch assured him.

"An' don't forget—compliments of me," Wild Water concluded, relaxing his detaining clutch on the proprietor's shoulder.

Pretty Lucille Arral was gazing forlornly at the strip of breakfast bacon and the tinned mashed potatoes on her plate when Slavovitch placed before her two shirred eggs.

"Compliments of Mr. Wild Water," they at the next table heard him say.

Smoke acknowledged to himself that it was a fine bit of acting—the quick, joyous flash in the face of her, the impulsive turn of the head, the spontaneous forerunner of a smile that was only checked by a superb self control which reluctantly drew her face back so that she could say something to the restaurant proprietor.

Smoke felt the kick of Wild Water's mooncashed foot under the table.

"Will she eat 'em—that's the question—will she eat 'em?" the latter whispered agonizingly.

And with sidelong glances they saw Lucille Arral hesitate, almost push the dish from her, then surrender to its lure.

"I'll take them eggs," Wild Water said to Smoke. "The contract holds. Did you see her? Did you see her? She almost smiled. I know her. It's all fixed. Two more eggs tomorrow an' she'll forgive an' make up. If she wasn't here I'd shake hands, Smoke. I'm that grateful. You ain't a robber; you're a philanthropist."

Smoke returned jubilantly up the hill to the cabin only to find Shorty in black despair.

"It's all off with the big Swede," he groaned. "The corner's busted. What d'ye think I run into? A geezer with three thousand eggs—d'ye get me?—three thousand an' just freighted in from Forty Mile."

"Gautereaux's his name, a whackin' big, blue-eyed French Canadian husky. It was our cornerin' eggs that got him started. He knowed about them three thousand at Forty Mile an' just went an' got 'em. 'Show 'em to me,' I says. An' he did. There was his dog teams an' a couple of Indian drivers restin' down the bank where they'd just pulled in from Forty Mile. An' on the sleds was soap boxes—teeny wooden soap boxes."

"We took one out behind a ice jam in the middle of the river an' busted it open. Eggs—full of 'em, all packed in sawdust. Smoke, you an' me lost. We've been gamblin'. D'ye know what he had the gall to say to me? That they was all out at $10 a egg. D'ye know what he was doin' when I left his cabin? Drawin' a sign of eggs for sale. Said he'd give us first choice at ten a throw till 2 p. m., and after that if we didn't come across he'd bust the market higher'n a kite."

"It's all right," Smoke said cheerfully. "Quick action and team play. I'll get Wild Water here at 2 o'clock to take delivery of eggs. You buy that Gautereaux's eggs. Even if you pay $10 apiece for them, Wild Water will take them off our hands at the same price. If you can get them cheaper—why, we make a profit as well. Have them here by not later than 2 o'clock. Borrow Colonel Bowie's dogs and take our team."

Smoke drew Wild Water at the M. & M., and a stormy half hour ensued.

"I warn you we've picked up some more eggs," Smoke said after Wild Water had agreed to bring his dust to the cabin at 2 o'clock and pay on delivery.

"You're luckier at finding eggs than me," Wild Water admitted. "Now, how many eggs have you got now—an' how much dust do I tote up the hill?"

Smoke consulted his notebook. "As it stands now, according to Shorty's figures, we're 3,962 eggs. Multiply by ten—"

"Forty thousand dollars!" Wild Water bellowed. "You said there was only something like 900 eggs. It's a stick-up. I won't stand for it!"

Smoke drew the contract from his pocket and pointed to the pay on delivery. "No mention is made of the number of eggs to be delivered. You agreed to pay $10 for every egg we delivered to you. Well, we've got the eggs, and a signed contract is a signed contract. Honestly, though, Wild Water, we didn't know about those other eggs until afterward. Then we had to buy them in order to make our corner good."

For five long minutes, in choking silence, Wild Water fought a battle with himself, then reluctantly gave in.

"I'm in bad," he said brokenly. "I'll be there at 2 o'clock. But $40,000!"

At 1:30 Shorty arrived with Gautereaux's eggs. "We pretty near double our winnings," Shorty told Smoke as they piled the soap boxes inside the cabin. "I holds 'em down to $8, and after he cussed loco in French he falls for it. Now, that's $2 clear profit to us for each egg."

Promptly at 2 o'clock Shorty, peepin', saw Wild Water coming up the hill. When he entered he was brisk and businesslike.

"Bring on them eggs, you pirates," he commenced. "An' after this day, if you know what's good for you, never mention eggs to me again."

They began on the miscellaneous assortment of the original corner, all three men counting. When 200 had been reached Wild Water suddenly cracked an egg on the edge of the table and opened it deftly with his thumbs.

"Hey, hold on!" Shorty objected. "It's my egg, ain't it?" Wild Water snarled. "I'm payin' $10 for it, ain't I? But I ain't buyin' no pig in a poke. When I cough up ten bucks an egg I want to know what I'm gettin'."

Wild Water looked and smiled. "That's a good egg. Gimme a pail. I'm goin' to eat it myself for supper."

Three again Wild Water cracked good eggs experimentally and put them in the pail beside him.

"Two more than you figured, Shorty," he said at the end of the count. "Nine hundred an' sixty-four, not sixty-two."

"My mistake," Shorty acknowledged handsomely. "We'll throw 'em in for good measure."

"Guess you can afford to," Wild Water accepted grimly. "Pass the batch—$9,620. I'll pay for it now. Write a receipt, Smoke."

Going to his fur coat, from each of the side pockets he drew forth two sacks of dust, so rotund and long that they resembled bologna sausages. When the first batch had been paid for there remained in the gold sacks not more than several hundred dollars.

A soap box was carried to the table, and the count of the $3,000 began. At the end of 100 Wild Water struck an egg sharply against the edge of the table. The resultant sound was like that of the striking of a sphere of solid marble.

"Frozen solid," he remarked.

"Huh!" said Shorty. "It ought to be solid, seen' it has just been freighted up from Forty Mile. It'll take a ax to bust it."

Smoke brought the ax and Wild Water split the egg cleanly in half. The appearance of the egg's interior was anything but satisfactory. Smoke felt a premonitory chill. Shorty was more valiant. He held one of the halves to his nose.

"Smells all right," he said.

"But it looks all wrong," Wild Water contended. "An' how can it smell when the smell's frozen along with the rest of it? Wait a minute."

He put the two halves into a frying pan and placed the latter on the front lid of the hot stove. Then the three men, with distended, quivering nostrils, waited in silence. Slowly an unmistakable odor began to drift through the room.

"Throw it out!" Smoke cried, gasping.

"What's the good?" asked Wild Water. "We've got to sample the rest."

"Not in this cabin," Smoke coughed and conquered a qualm. "Chop them open, and we can test by looking at them. Throw it out, Shorty! Throw it out! And leave the door open!"

Box after box was opened; egg after egg, chosen at random, was chopped in two, and every egg carried the same message of hopeless, irremediable decay.

"I won't ask you to eat 'em, Shorty," Wild Water jeered, "an', if you don't mind, I can't get out here too quick. My contract called for good eggs. If you'll loan me a sled an' team I'll haul them good ones away before they get contaminated."

Smoke helped in loading the sled. "Say, how long you been holdin' that corner?" was Wild Water's parting gibe.

Smoke made no reply, and, with one glance at his partner, proceeded to fling the soap boxes out into the snow.

"Say, Shorty, how much did you say you paid for that three thousand?" Smoke queried gently.

"Eight dollars. Don't talk to me. I can figger as well as you. We lose seventeen thousand on the fluffer, if anybody should ride up on a dog sled an' ask you. I figured that out while waitin' for the first egg to smell."

Smoke pondered a few minutes, then again broke silence. "Say, Shorty, $40,000 gold weighs 200 pounds. Wild Water borrowed our sled and team to haul away his eggs. He came up the hill without a sled. Those two sacks of dust in his coat pockets weighed about twenty pounds each. The understanding was cash on delivery. He brought enough dust to pay for the good eggs. He never expected to pay for those three thousand. He knew they were bad. Now, how did he know they were bad? What do you make of it anyway?"

"Huh! That ain't nothin'. A child could answer it. We lose seventeen thousand. Wild Water wins seventeen thousand. Them eggs of Gautereaux's was Wild Water's all the time. Anything else you're curious to know?"

"Yes. Why in the name of common sense didn't you find out whether those eggs were good before you paid for them?"

"Just as easy as the first question. Wild Water swung the bunko game timed to seconds. I hadn't no time to examine them eggs. I had to hustle to get 'em here for delivery. An' now, Smoke, lemme ask you one civil question. What did you say was the party's name that put this egg corner idea into your head?"

Smoke was casting about to begin the preparation for supper when Colonel Bowie knocked at the door, handed Smoke a letter and went on to his own cabin.

"Did you see his face?" Shorty raved. "He was almost bustin' to keep it straight. It's the big ha-ha for you an' me, Smoke. We won't never dust show our faces again in Dawson."

The letter was from Wild Water, and Smoke read it aloud:

"Dear Smoke and Shorty—I write to ask, with compliments of the season, your presence at a supper tonight at Slavovitch's joint. Miss Arral will be there and so will Gautereaux. Him and me was partners down at Circle five years ago. He is all right and is going to be best man. About them eggs. They come into the country four years back. They was all bad when they come in. They was bad when they left California. They always was bad. They stopped at Carluk one winter, and one winter at Nutlik, and last winter at Forty Mile, where they was sold for storage. And this winter I guess they stop at Dawson. Don't keep them in a hot room. Lucille says to say you and her and me has sure made some excitement in Dawson. And I say the drinks is on you, and that goes. W. W."

And How the Deficiency Was Made Good.

By EUGENE A. VOGT

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Don't fool yourself! Not every man who is broke is unworthy of his manhood.

It's just the other way with the chap worth while, and Jack Ruford was almost as good, decent and clean a fellow as his sweetheart thought he was.

Mabel Ainsworth—that's the girl with the unerring judgment—had a father when Jack failed in business.
Mr. Ainsworth instituted proceedings with his daughter, Mabel, who loved Jack, broke or whole, and for reasons known only to the feminine mind did not hesitate to say so. Mr. Ainsworth tried to reason.

He was a lawyer in good practice, and his logic was excellent. Mabel remarked that she loved Jack. Her father began to intimate something heavy about filial love, duty, obedience, and so forth.

Mabel repeated that she loved Jack.
The father sought Jack and talked to the young man in a manner for which Jack would have knocked the talk out of him had he not been Mabel's father.

"Look at this!" commanded Ruford and thrust an open letter under the proboscis of his reluctant father-in-law.
"Well, what is it all about?" asked Ainsworth after he had read the type written lines.

"It's this," replied Jack, more in pity than in ire. "The Wetmore Drug company of New York offers me the sole agency for Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Iowa."

"Yes, yes," interrupted Mabel's father, with offensive impatience.

"Yes, yes—when you talk to me,
Mr. Ainsworth!" corrected Jack sternly.
"Yes, yes!" repeated Ainsworth without affirming anything in particular.

"There you go again!" snapped the potential conqueror of the drug trade of four progressive states. "How many times shall I have to tell you that it's
'yes, sir,' to me from you? Please do not forget that again, my dear Mr.
Ainsworth. By the way, how much money will it take to buy your daughter from you, with your original ideas of paternal ownership?"

"Not an infernal red cent!" roared Ainsworth. "Nor a yellow million nor a stack of greenbacks as high as this postoffice—from you, sir! I'll sir you! Even if you had the ability to make any appreciable part of it, you couldn't have my daughter now for all the money in the world, sir!"

"Are you through?" asked Ruford calmly. The lawyer nodded violently.
"All right, then," proceeded the young man. "I'm really surprised at you, Mr. Ainsworth. And with your legal attainments too. Mabel is of age.
You know that. I know it and she knows it. Listen to me! I can walk down this Main street three blocks, turn into Locust and walk four and a half more, stop at 416, enter, wait four minutes for a certain young lady to put on her hat and coat, walk out, ring a bell, enter house, emerge married. And you know it!"

"I know it!" gasped the hapless father.

"A man who can do that, Mr. Ainsworth," proceeded Jack unfeelingly,
"must be handled with care. Let us then, try kindness."

"I always thought, Jack," said the lawyer in his best appealing voice,
"that at heart you were a very decent young fellow."

"I am," agreed Jack modestly. "My purpose being to get down to a calm discussion of the differences between us, I shall not refer to your wonderful restraint of expression of your good opinion of me."

Both men laughed at this sally.
"Now, Mr. Ainsworth," proceeded the young man pleasantly, "you are mostly right about me and would be all right if you weren't so infernally vigorous in expressing yourself. I have no right to marry Mabel in my present circumstances, until I have shown—mostly for my own satisfaction—that I can make money enough to support her. Now, I shall be gone a year. When I come back, if I can show you $5,000 will that soften your heart?"

"Jack," replied Mabel's father with deep feeling, "if you ever show me $5,000 of your own money, honestly earned, and if I don't drop dead at sight of it I'll consent."

"Mind you," said Jack as they shook hands on it, "I am doing this thing out of pure magnanimity of soul. You understand that, don't you?"

"Fully," acknowledged Mr. Ainsworth.

It was on the three hundred and fiftieth night of his quest that Jack arrived at his hotel in St. Louis, bubbling over with enthusiasm. He joked with the clerk as he registered with a flourish and staggered the bellboy who escorted him to his room with a fifty cent tip. After the minion had bowed himself out Jack threw himself on a chair and exultantly opened his suit case.

"It's all over, Mabelita!" he cried, addressing that young lady's photograph, which he had pinned on his suit case's inner lid. "We've got it! We've got it!
The Wetmore Drug company owes me

$5,140.50. Those last seven orders in Decatur give me $147.30 and make us cross the line, darling. Now for a run home to dear old Pillsbury to see you and get you to name the day."

The bellboy entered and obsequiously tendered a telegram on a near silver salver. Jack looked uneasily first at the bearer, then at the message. He tore open the yellow envelope. He stared at the slip of paper he extracted from it, his eyes wide and incredulous.

At last he roused himself, smoothed out the sheet and stared at it as though he hoped the very fixity of his gaze would change its tenor.

"No," he mumbled hopelessly. "It's no use—it's there, it's there! Wetmore Drug company asking compromise with creditors. Offer 20 cents on dollar." He repeated it stupidly and with inane comments.

His head sank down on the table,
and he was lost in utter dejection.

Jack Ruford arrived in New York on the second night after the receipt of the crushing telegram. He entered a modest hotel on a side street near Broadway and scowled at the attentive bellboy who relieved him of his suit case.

There was nothing for him to do but to think—until the morning, when Jack hoped, the offices of the Wetmore Drug company would be open. He ordered the bellboy to escort him and his baggage to the room assigned to him.

"What kind of a joint is this, anyway?" snarled the distracted young man as the bellboy set the wrong suit case on the table of the room. "This isn't my suit case."

"Oh, beg pardon, sir!" apologized
the bewildered boy. "Isn't it?"

"No, it isn't, isn't it?" mocked Jack angrily. "Take the thing away and fetch mine. Marked J. R."

The bellboy hastened away with the offending portmanteau, but soon returned, saying: "Sorry, mister. I brought it to the wrong room. It looked so much like yours."

"Well, then, why the dickens don't you get it?"

"That's the trouble," stammered the bellboy. "The lady says for you to come and get it yourself. She won't give it to me, sir."

"Won't, hey? She won't, won't she?"
demanded Jack furiously. "Take me to it, kid. I'll set her straight in two seconds—just exactly two seconds."

The dazed boy led the irate guest down one corridor and up another and stopped before a door marked 216.
Jack knocked authoritatively, and a feminine voice called "Come in." The young man flung open the door.

"Madam," he began, icily stern.

"Mad—I—I!"

And then this prince of glib talkers suddenly lost the power of articulation, for Mabel Ainsworth slowly turned to face him, confirming the first wild guess, fear and hope which the sight of her figure had inspired.

"I think it very careless of you, Jack," began Mabel reproachfully, "to keep your suit case unlocked."

"I—I—"

"Oh, it's all right this time," she reassured him. "Thinking it was mine, and as I never lock mine either, I opened it and saw—this."

She waved her hand toward her photograph resting in its conspicuous place against the inner lid of the suit case.

"I suppose," he said gloomily, "that all is over, Mabel. I shall have to give you up, darling. Billy Wetmore!"

"What?" she cried indignantly. "Give me up on account of $6.80?"

"Six dollars and eighty cents! I don't understand!" gasped Jack.

"Of course you don't. But that is all we are short on our five thousand."

"I—I—" stammered her lover. Then with infinite gentleness: "It's 20 per cent, dear, one-fifth he offers. Understand? One-fifth of our five thousand —just one thousand, dear, just one—"

"Oh, no, it isn't," she interposed impatiently. "You see, papa?"

"What has he been doing now?"
asked Jack doubtfully.

"He saved the situation for you and himself," she assured him. "You see,
I told papa very flatly that at the end of the year I would marry you anyway, money or no money."

"Mabel, darling, I can't do it!"
"Because you do not love me any more, Jack?" she asked cruelly.

"You know better than that, Mabel,"
he replied reproachfully.

"Forgive me, dearest," she said con-tritely. "I do know it." She tenderly placed one of her pink fingers on her conspicuous photograph. "As I was saying—and, please, let us talk business, dear—papa, being assured that I would marry you anyway, proceeded, lawyer-like, to save his face. When he learned that you—poor, overtrusting boy—were letting your monthly earnings stand with Mr. Wetmore he wrote that gentleman—whom, in the first place, he had induced to offer you this place—all about why you were working so hard and induced him to send your monthly earnings to the Pillsbury National bank, where the money is now deposited in your name.
But there is only $1,993.20, and papa's strong point as a lawyer always has been technicalities. So I came to New York—in some way—to get that $6.80.
And, oh, Jack—my own dear, splendid, faithful Jack—we have to get it honestly or at least legally."

One hour later (western time) Mr.
William Ainsworth sat in the Morris chair in his library, chuckling over the following telegram:

Dear Papa—Jack is here at hotel. He just sold me his supply of drug samples at sacrifice. Six dollars and eighty cents!
Please deposit that amount to his credit in Pillsbury National bank, and charge my allowance account. We are leaving for home on midnight train.

Tell Mary Smith she will be bridesmaid.
Jack sends his love. He is looking well.
Lovingly, MABEL.

(Charges collect.)

Upwards of fifty members of the Community Service Union of Weymouth and East Braintree met in the vestry of the Baptist church in Lincoln square Weymouth, last Friday night to conduct several business matters pertaining to the Union.

Rev. Chester J. Underhill presided. It was voted to continue the Sunday night Forum program through the month of April. The subject of "Vocational Schools" was talked over and it was decided to lay on the table for one month the question of whether women shall be admitted to membership in the Community Service Union.

Weymouth Board of Trade.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade was held at the Clapp Memorial building, Wednesday evening with A. P. Worthen, Esq. in the chair.

The committee on membership reported 7 new names which were balloted for and elected. The uncompleted annual meeting resulted in the election of George W. Downing as president and David M. Kilder, vice president.

A topic for discussion was co-operation of village improvement societies and the Board of Trade for town uplift and efforts will be made along those lines.

Warrant Completed in a Day

The Expected Happened! The Expected Did Not Happen! The Unexpected Happened!

Ideal weather conditions, the novelty of meeting in a new locality together with the prospects of much heated discussion on some lines and several important articles to be disposed of, all drew an extra large gathering to Fog's Opera House South Weymouth last Monday at the annual March Town Meeting of the Town of Weymouth. When Town Clerk John A. Raymond read the call for the meeting at 9:15 o'clock A. M. it is estimated that there were about five hundred voters in the hall, all who entered, first being checked off of the several precinct check lists before they were allowed to enter the hall.

When Mr. Raymond had finished reading the call and got started on the unnecessary reading of the ninety-six articles, Judge L. A. Cook moved that the clerk forego the reading of the several articles. The motion prevailed and Article 1, of the warrant was taken up, this article being to choose a moderator for the meeting. Melville Cate moved that the Town Clerk be authorized to cast one ballot for Judge Cook to serve as moderator. Amid considerable applause Judge Louis A. Cook was sworn in by Mr. Raymond for his 26th term as moderator of Weymouth's annual town meeting and at this time it is only right to say that Judge Cook handled the meeting of 1915 in the same able manner that has characterized the Weymouth Town Meetings in years past.

After thanking the people of Weymouth for the honor Judge Cook proceeded to take up the warrant.

At this juncture E. L. O'Brien of Ward 3 started what turned out to be the longest and most humorous line of argument presented during the day. His first motion was to adjourn until 7 o'clock Monday evening. The meeting voted No very strenuously to this motion and then Mr. E. L. O'Brien spoke of several registered lady voters waiting in the corridor and desired admittance to witness how the "men folks" carried on the town affairs. Mr. Lund moved that they be admitted and after a doubtful "aye" and "nay" vote, the tellers, H. C. Alvord and Mr. John Whelan, appointed by the moderator, announced that "109 have voted in the affirmative and 11 in the negative". The ladies were allowed the use of the box in the left hand corner of the hall. During the day about twenty of the "fair sex" gathered in the box to listen to the discussion on the floor of the house.

Mr. Greeley got the floor and questioned the legality of the meeting, as the town voted at the meeting last year to instruct the Selectmen to call future town meetings in the evenings when it is claimed more would be able to be present. Mr. Greeley strongly questioned the Selectmen's rights in this matter but Town Counsel Mr. A. P. Worthen stated that the meeting had been called according to law and was therefore legal and the meeting proceeded.

Art. 2. To choose all necessary town officers other than those elected by ballot! It was moved that the Moderator appoint a committee to make up such a list during the noon recess. The list of officers will appear in next week's issue.

Art. 3. To hear and act upon the reports of the several boards of town officers and of any committee appointed at any former meeting, and to choose any committee the town may think proper.

The reports of the Selectmen, Overseers of the Poor, School Committee, Park Commissioners, Fire Department, Town Clerk, Assessors, Health Department, Tufts Library, Lighting Committee, Water Commissioners, Town Planning Board, Tree Warden, Moth Department, Fire Warden, Sealer of Weights and Measures, Tax Collector, Registrars of Voters, Tufts Fund, Fire Apparatus, Live Stock and Building Inspector, all passed without any discussion. Mr. Sheehy wished for information on the town debt, listed in the Town Report and shortly after the Town Accountant's report was unanimously accepted. Rev. Mr. Alvord asked for a very strict enforcement of the liquor law in accepting the Police Department report. Mr. Bradford Hawes clerk of the Selectmen, reported in regard to the alewife fishery. The report as Mr. Hawes read was accepted and Mr. Worthen moved that it be put into effect at once. Mr. O'Brien pointed his guns on the Town Highway Superintendent and requested good logical information why he (the street supt.) had conducted graveling work on Washington street near Mr. O'Brien's residence as he had. No reply came to Mr. O'Brien's questions and then Mr. Sheehy asked that the report of the committee to reduce the Boards of Selectmen etc., to less members be postponed until such time that article 7 should be taken up. Judge Cook reported on his trip to England last summer and then Mr. Worthen spoke on the tax question in regard to methods of obtaining rebate when tax is considered too high on property. The two ways open to the dissatisfied citizen follow: 1st: If entire tax is considered illegal he (the taxpayer) should pay the tax under protest and then sue within one year after date for rebate, or he may refuse to pay at all and let the assessors sue him within one year after date; 2d. Oyer valuation: The taxpayer should petition the Assessors within six months for abatement. If not abated he may appeal to the Superior Court. However, he must before abatement will be made, file a list of property to be assessed. He further stated that there was no way at this time for those in Wards 1 and 2 who were dissatisfied with their tax bills of 1913 and 1914, to obtain redress.

At this point the Moderator appointed A. P. Worthen, W. T. Simpson W. J. Holbrook, M. E. Hawes and J. A. Holbrook as the committee to bring in a list of minor officers to be considered in the afternoon.

Art. 4. To see if the town will vote to authorize the Treasurer, with the approval of the Selectmen, to borrow money in anticipation of the revenue of the current financial year. Adopted as article recommends.

Art. 5. To see what sum of money the town will vote to raise and appropriate for a reserve fund. In regard to this article Mr. Bradford Hawes gave idea of the article. Rev. Chester J. Underhill of Ward 3 moved an amendment to have motion to raise reserve fund, that the sum of $1,000 be added to the amount of the fund, the $1,000 to be available after December 1, 1915 to reflect the town unemployment among the citizens of the town. Mr. Underhill's amendment prevailed, but it was voted to lay the matter on the table until the afternoon session.

Art. 6. To see if the town will designate the First National Bank of South Weymouth, the First National Bank of Boston and the National Shawmut Bank of Boston as legal depositories for the funds of the town, and the First National Safe Deposit Company of Boston, Mass., a legal depository for the securities of the town. By request of the committee. Voted to carry out the wishes of the appropriation committee, which favored the same depository banks as last year.

Art. 7. To see if the town will vote to reduce the number of its selectmen, overseers of the poor and assessors from five to three members and to elect the same in the year 1916 in the following manner: one for a term of one year, one for a term of two years, and one for a term of three years, and annually thereafter elect one for a term of three years and determine the amount of compensation to be paid to said officers per year or take any action in relation thereto. W. J. Holbrook reported for the committee who have been investigating this idea since their appointment two years ago. The committee favored reducing the Board of Selectmen and Overseers of the Poor to three members. He gave several instances of towns who had adopted the three men system. After some little discussion it was voted to postpone action on this article, until next Town Meeting when the voters would be able to vote more intelligently on the question.

Art. 8. On petition of John L. Bean and nine others: To see if the town will vote to amend Section I of the town by-laws by striking out the word "first" in the second line and substituting the word "second" and by striking out the word "second" in the fifth line and substituting the word "first"; this amendment to take effect upon its passage. J. L. Bean spoke in favor of this article and it was carried without much opposition. B. Hawes spoke of the necessary movement to have the state's approval of the matter and P. E. Sullivan moved that Representative K. L. Nash be instructed to look after this side of the matter.

Art. 9. To see if the town will vote to authorize the Treasurer with the approval of the Selectmen, on or after January 1, 1916, to borrow money in anticipation of revenue of the year 1916. This article was carried as recommended.

Art. 10. To see what sum of money the town will vote to raise and appropriate for the support of public schools and for the transportation of pupils to and from school. In connection with article 10 Melville Cate asked that article 11 be taken up. The motion to this effect prevailed and the "big" business of the warrant was on the boards. Article 11 was as follows:

On petition of W. S. Wells and nineteen others: To see if the town will erect and furnish a 14 or 16 room school building in Ward Three adequate for the use of 560 pupils and will raise and by a loan or otherwise appropriate to those uses a sum sufficient for the purpose and take all other action necessary or proper to carry into effect the foregoing proposition.

In a fiery speech Mr. Greeley strongly opposed the article being considered. Rev. Mr. Underhill clearly stated why the Ward 3 people wanted the new school building and cited the sanitary conditions in the Tufts and other Ward 3 school buildings as well as other very unsafe and disgraceful conditions. Charles Guertin next came to time with a clever reply to the recent declaration that the increased cost in taxes would be felt more by the property owner than by the poorer man, saying that in his case when the taxes went up he found that the rents for houses also increased considerably. He said the idea that the poor man didn't have to shoulder as much of the burden as the property owner was decidedly wrong. He spoke of the building locations, of the sanitary conditions and he finished by strongly opposing the school-house proposition.

William Wall next hammered the defence of the school house advocate in regard to the location of the new building. He favored the town land on the westerly side of Mrs. William Caulfield's estate on Broad street. After declaring himself as in favor of the new building he offered an amendment to the article, that the sum of $65,000 be raised and appropriated for a 14 room school-house on the land near said Caulfield estate, the difference in figures from the appropriation committee being on account of the fact that stone and some other supplies were available on the lot he (Mr. Wall) favored.

Peter Gallant asked for information on the drainage of the land. Mr. O'Brien with his ready wit next threw a bomb into the 14 room building by amending the amendment of Mr. Wall so that a 6 room school house should be erected. He also favored fixing up the Hunt school as it ought to be fixed up.

Mr. Cuniff next spoke and then as the audience looked rather famished and as it was now 12 o'clock Mr. Greeley moved to adjourn until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The motion prevailed and a large number of the out of town contingent stepped into the Union church where the Women's Relief Corps, No. 102, served lunch, while some talked over the doings over a luncheon at Archie Blanchard's restaurant and South Weymouthites made quick trips to their homes for "hurry-up lunches."

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 12:45 the checkers were again on the job and about 900 voters entered the hall to complete the schoolhouse problem and carry out the other business. At this time the outlook for finishing the warrant in the immediate future seemed rather remote, but all forgot the articles coming after the school-house question and promptly at one o'clock discussion on Ward 3's needs was resumed.

Mr. Cuniff was first to recover from the feeling of satisfaction after a good dinner and moved an amendment to those already made that a committee of 3 from each ward be selected to consider the needs of the schools in Ward 3, said committee to have no member of the school committee among its roll. J. H. Walsh boosted the school house advocates stock considerably by a fine address in favor of the 14 room school building and ended by asking the citizens to regard "Safety First, Protect Your Children."

Mr. Cuniff's amendment was now voted upon and was lost 160 to 137.

Question now on Mr. Wall's amendment or $65,000 idea. Before any action was taken George C. Torrey spoke strongly against the idea of putting so many scholars under one roof as would be necessary in a 14 room structure. Mr. O'Brien got restless at this time and he once more spoke on the subject. Joseph Cushing of East Weymouth was of the opinion that the Ward 3 adherents were divided on their wants and also that $79,000 was not enough money to build a 14 room school-house these days. Melville Cate said the figure was given by competent architects and the appropriation committee believed the amount sufficient. O'Brien spoke again and then Nelson Gardner got the floor and expressed the opinion that while Ward 3 might need a new school-house he didn't favor such a large one at this time. As the discussion had been going two hours and a half in all and an hour since lunch time, and no headway seemed to be made, M. E. Hawes moved that all discussion be stopped in about fifteen minutes or at 2:20 and the article come to a vote. This motion was voted down. Mr. Cuniff again spoke to

BRILLIANT SOCIAL EVENT.

Studley-Bates Nuptials.

The home of George L. Bates, Lafayette avenue, East Weymouth, and the Methodist church were the scenes of the most brilliant event East Weymouth has seen for a decade, on Wednesday evening, said event being the marriage of Mr. Bates' daughter, Blanche Alma to Henry Gordon Studley of Quincy.

The house was exquisitely decorated with bells of white crepe paper, daffodils and greenery. An aisle was formed with white satin ribbon through which the bridal party descended to the parlor to the music of a wedding march by Mrs. William A. Hodges.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. William M. Newton of the Methodist church with double ring service. The matron of honor was Mrs. Jessie Buffum of East Weymouth and the best man was Capt. George Studley of Needham. The ring bearer was little Morgan Stetson, nephew of the groom and the flower girls were Lucille Studley of Needham and Eleanor Stetson of East Weymouth, who carried baskets of pansies.

The ushers were George Burns of Campbell, James Forest of Quincy and C. Lewis French and Dr. Henry Stetson of East Weymouth.

The bride's dress was ivory white satin with the conventional veil fastened with real orange blossoms, a gift to the bride from Orlando, Florida and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor wore yellow satin messaline with blue chiffon girdle and decorated with rose buds as was also her cap of gold net. She carried Wardell roses.

The bride's gift to the matron of honor was a crescent brooch, to the flower girls crescents, to the ushers, handsome stickpins.

A large reception in the chapel of the Methodist church followed the event at the home. In the receiving line were the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Bates; the matron of honor, Mrs. Jessie Buffum; the bride and groom and the best man, Capt. George Studley, brother of the groom, and Mrs. Helen M. Studley, mother of the groom.

A very choice wedding lunch was served with music by Maxim's orchestra and vocal solos by Mr. Hayden of Quincy.

At ten o'clock, the bride and groom departed amid a shower of confetti and the ringing of the church bell.

East Weymouth Cemetery Association.

The annual meeting of the East Weymouth Cemetery Association, adjourned from Wednesday evening March 3rd was held at the rooms of the Savings Bank building Tuesday evening. Meeting was called to order by the president M. E. Hawes and the following officers elected: M. E. Hawes, president; John A. Raymond, clerk and treasurer; W. P. Denbroeder, C. Harrington, W. E. Ames, W. C. Earle, B. B. Sylvester, Mrs. Charles Harrington, Mrs. Wm. A. Wheaton, Mrs. N. E. Ames and Miss Alida M. Denton, executive committee; C. Harrington, W. P. Denbroeder and W. E. Ames, auditors. W. P. Denbroeder was appointed as superintendent of the grounds.

Mrs. Charles Harrington and W. P. Denbroeder, committee to carry out the terms of the wills of Mrs. Jane Kingman and W. T. Rice in regard to flowers.

The reports of the treasurer and superintendent showed the financial balance well on the right side and grounds materially improved.

High School Notes.

A town meeting, with a moderator, and with speeches usual and unusual, was held by the Senior class on Monday. Interest was highest on the new school article and the two articles relating to the fire department. Riley '15, and Talbot were clerk and moderator respectively.

Two hundred copies of the W. H. S. March, compose by Frank L. Vender '15, we disposed of on the first day of sale of the piece. The cover contains a picture of the High school, the title and dedication, while there are three full pages of music, making in all a march to be proud of. Vender has had the music copy-righted.

The debate with Quincy High school has been cancelled, owing to its nearness to the Brockton debate, which comes only two days after the date set for the one at Quincy. Tickets for the latter will be on sale next Monday.

The baseball candidates reported for batting practice this week in the field near the James Humphrey school yard. A good many more men were out this week than formerly, and the excellence of the weather will give the squad a great start-off.

Experienced feeders of silage are urging their neighbors to avoid feeding moldy or decayed silage to any class of live stock.

The pear is successfully and profitably grown as a "dwarf." Being budded on quince root makes it a slow, dwarfish grower—the fruit is the same as that produced by "standard pear trees."

Ten years ago the yearly expenditure for labor by farmers of this state amounted to $7,487,000, and the increase within a decade has been 62 per cent.
Eighty-two percent of the amount paid for labor by Massachusetts farmers is cash.

Radishes are easy to raise, but if they are forced too much are liable to go mostly to tops. A few days longer in growing will give them better quality.
All small, imperfect seed ought to be sifted out. The stand should average from one-half inch to an inch in the row, and the rows ought to be five inches apart.

In nearly every section where fruit growing is new, insects and fungous pests do little damage during the first few years the trees are bearing. But before the trees have produced many crops, both insects and diseases become important factors in the production of marketable crops.

Many poultrymen think that when summer arrives their responsibility in regard to the dusting bath ceases. This is not always true. The fowls like their dusting bath in a certain condition. This means damp, fine, soft earth. It is a mistake to think fowls want their dust dry. To be effective in dressing their plumage it should be clean and fresh.
The ideal place for a dusting bath is under a bush where soil has been recently watered or has had no sun to dry it out.

No farm home vegetable garden should be without a good row or bed of asparagus. It is of the easiest culture and can be grown almost anywhere. It comes on for table use very early in spring before most other plants are ready and a short row of it will supply a common-sized family with an abundance of this appetizing and healthful green food for four or five weeks at a season when green things are most relished.

All bee hives should be carefully examined early in the spring; all dead colonies should have their hives put out of reach of robbers and wax moths, the weak colonies' entrances made larger or smaller, according to the size of the colony. The weak that are without food should be fed, and the strong made stronger as fast as possible.

It is not the hard work or the exposure or even the poverty of the farmer or his wife which makes farm life so unattractive to so many of our people. It is the lack of team work. I have never known men and women, particularly young men and young women, of our race to shrink from hardship if they could feel the touch of elbows and have the sense of comradeship which the soldier has. Our boys and girls as well as the men and women of the farm should develop team work. They should get together and work together for a common cause as the soldiers.

The Concord is decidedly the most popular grape in America, and deservedly so.
Adapts itself to varying conditions and is grown with more or less profit in every grape growing state in the Union. Bunch large, shouldered, compact; berries large, covered with rich bloom; skin tender,
but sufficiently firm to carry well to distant markets; flesh juicy, sweet, pulpy, tender; vine a strong grower, very hardy, healthy and productive. For general cultivation most reliable and profitable.

When a man gets tired of wasting his time with inferior scrub stock, he is headed in the right direction to get into live-stock farming on a paying basis. He still has a great deal to learn, however, and especially concerning just what really good live-stock should be. The right kind of pure-bred stock properly handled will always win. The man who has just had his eyes opened to the fact that high-class pure bred stock has for years been bred and developed solely from the standpoint of efficiency, has learned the most important fact in connection with becoming a

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY SEVEN YEARS AGO.
A vote was passed that the surveyors be instructed to shovel the sidewalks, in case of snow, as the Selectmen may see fit.

A discussion on the question of screening gravel used on the roads resulted in the adoption of a motion to have the gravel screened.

A petition is now being circulated in the shops and through the village of East Weymouth to have a night police.

The Methodist society have had a well drove in the cellar of the church, a fine spring of water being reached at the depth of 18 feet.

A lot of English sparrows came here from Boston about one year ago, making their home on the premises of Albert Humphrey, Esq., who has built a few houses in the trees for them, and the prospects are that there will be a large number this year.

The Piscatorial association held a meeting last Tuesday evening for the choice of officers. J. M. Whitcomb was elected president; S. A. Cook, secretary; Edward Rosenfeld, treasurer; Geo. W. Conant, B.
F. Locke, James Stuart, Alvin Hollis,
David S. Murray, trustees. The meeting was adjourned to Tuesday evening next, for the purpose of drafting by-laws in regard to fishery, when a lively time is expected.

How Indians Purified Water.
The Indians had a way of purifying water from a pond or swamp by digging a hole about a foot across and down about six inches below the water level a few feet from the pond.
After it was filled with water, they balled it out quickly, repeating the bailing process about three times.
After the third bailing the hole would be filled with filtered water. Try it.—

SMOKE, sitting on the edge of a sleeping robe, examined the feet of a dog he had rolled, snarling, on its back in the snow.

"We've got to rest over tomorrow and make moccasins," he vouchsafed.
"That little crust is playing the devil with their feet."

"We oughta keep goin' somehow," Shorty objected. "We ain't got grub enough to turn back with, and we gotta strike that run of caribou or them white Indians almighty soon or we'll be eatin' the dogs, sore feet an' all.
Now, who even seen them white Indians anyway? Nothin' but hearsay.
An' how can a Indian be white?
Smoke, we just gotta travel tomorrow."

"They'll travel all the better with a day's rest for their feet and moccasins all around," Smoke counseled. "If you get a chance at any low divide take a peep over the country beyond. We're likely to strike open rolling country any time now. That's what La Perle told us to look for."

"Huh! By his own story it was ten years ago that La Perle come through this section, an' he was that loco from hunger he couldn't know what he did see. An' he said himself he never seen any white Indians. That was Anton's yarn. An' Anton kicked the bucket two years before you an' me come to Alaska. But I'll take a look tomorrow.
An' maybe I might pick up a moose."

Smoke spent the morning in camp sewing dog moccasins. At noon he cooked a meal for two and began to look for Shorty's return. An hour later he strapped on his snowshoes and went out on his partner's trail.

The way led up the bed of the stream through a narrow gorge that widened suddenly into a moose pasture. But no moose had been there since the first snow of the preceding fall. The tracks of Shorty's snowshoes crossed the pasture and went up the easy slope of a low divide. At the crest Smoke halted.
The tracks continued down the other slope. The first spruce trees, in the creek bed, were a mile away, and it was evident that Shorty had passed through them and gone on. Smoke looked at his watch, remembered the oncoming darkness, the dogs and the camp and reluctantly decided against going farther.

Until midnight Smoke maintained a huge fire for the guidance of Shorty.
And in the morning, waiting with camp broken and dogs harnessed for the first break of light, Smoke took up the pursuit. In the narrow pass of the canyon his lead dog pricked up its ears and whined. Then Smoke came upon the Indians, six of them, coming toward him. They were traveling light, without dogs, and on each man's back was the smallest of outfits.

Surrounding Smoke, they immediately gave him several matters for surprise. That they were looking for him was clear. That they talked no Indian tongue of which he knew a word was also quickly made clear. They were not white Indians, though they were taller and heavier than the Indians of the Yukon basin. Five of them carried the old fashioned, long barreled Hudson Bay company musket, and in the hands of the sixth was a Winchester rifle which Smoke knew to be Shorty's.

Nor did they waste time in making him a prisoner. Unarmed himself, Smoke could only submit. The contents of the sled were distributed among their own packs, and he was given a back composed of his and Shorty's sleeping furs. The dogs were unharn-essed, and when Smoke protested one of the Indians by signs indicated a trail too rough for sled travel. Smoke bowed to the inevitable, caught the sled end on in the snow on the bank above the stream and trudged on with his captors.

The first night was spent in a camp which had been occupied for several days. Here was cached a quantity of dried salmon and a sort of pemmican, which the Indians added to their packs.
From this camp a trail of many snowshoes led off—Shorty's captors, was Smoke's conclusion—and before darkness fell he succeeded in making out the tracks Shorty's narrower snowshoes had left.

Always in the days that followed they pointed north, and always the trail, turning and twisting through a jumble of upstanding peaks, trended north.

In six days they gained and crossed the central pass, low in comparison with the mountains it threaded, yet formidable in itself and not possible for loaded sleds. Five days more of tortuous winding, from lower altitude to lower altitude, brought them to the open, rolling and merely hilly country
La Perle had found ten years before.

Smoke knew it with the first glimpse.
Far as he could see rolled the open country. High in the east the Rockies still thrust their snowy ramparts heavenward. To the south and west extended the broken ranges of the projecting spur system they had crossed.

And in this vast pocket lay the country La Perle had traversed—snow blanketed, but assuredly fat with game at some time in the year and in the summer a smiling, forested and flowered land.

Before midday, traveling down a broad stream, they came upon the site of a large camp, recently abandoned.
Glancing as he went by it, Smoke estimated 400 or 500 fires and guessed the population to be in the thousands.
So fresh was the trail and so well packed by the multitude that Smoke and his captors took off their snowshoes and in their moccasins struck a swifter pace.

In the long twilight no sign was manifested of making camp. They held steadily on through a deepening gloom that vanished under a sky of light-great glittering stars, half veiled by a greenish vapor of pulsing aurora borealis. His dogs first caught the noises of the camp, pricking their ears and whining in low eagerness. Then it came to the ears of the humans—a murmur dim with distance.

The men about him quickened. The legs that had lifted through a dozen strenuous hours lifted in a still swifter pace that was half a run and mostly a running jog. Through a dark spruce that they burst upon an abrupt glare of light from many fires and upon an abrupt increase of sound. The great camp lay before them.

And as they entered and threaded
the irregular runways of the hunting camp a vast tumult as in a wave rose to meet them and rolled on with them —cries, greetings, questions and answers, jokes and jokes thrust back again, the snapping snarl of wolf dogs, the scolding of squaws, laughter, the whimpering of children and wailing of infants, all the pandemonium of a camp of nerveless, primitive wilderness folk.

They halted in the trampled snow by an open fire, where Shorty and two young Indians, squatted on their hams, were broiling strips of caribou meat.
Three other young Indians, lying in furs on a mat of spruce boughs, sat up.
Shorty looked across the fire at his partner, but with a sternly impassive face, like those of his companions, made no sign and went on broiling the meat.

"What's the matter?" Smoke demanded, half in irritation. "Lost your speech?"

The old familiar grin twisted on Shorty's face. "Nope," he answered.
"I'm a Indian. I'm learnin' not to show surprise. When did they catch you?"

"Next day after you left."

"Huh! Well, I'm don't fine, thank you most to death. This is the bachelors' camp. An' these are the bachelors. They're glad to meet you Smoke. Set down an' dry your moccasins, an' I'll cook up some grub.
You'll have to come to it, for looks as if we'll be with these folks a long time. They's another white man here.
Got caught six years ago. Danny Mc-Can is what he goes by. He's settled down with a squaw. Got two kids already, but he'll skin out if ever the chance opens up."

Apparently this was Smoke's appointed domicile, for his captors left him and his dogs and went on deeper into the big camp. While he devoured strips of hot meat Shorty talked.

"This is a sure peach of a pickle, Smoke. An' we got to go some to get out. These is the real, blowed in the glass wild Indians. They ain't white, but their chief is. He talks like a mouthful of hot mush, an' if he ain't full blooded Scotch they ain't no such thing as Scotch in the world. He's the hi-yu, skookum, top chief of the whole caboodle. What he says goes. You want to get that from the start off.

"Danny McCan's been tryin' to get away from him for six years. Danny's all right, but he ain't got go in him. He knows a way out—learned it on huntin' trips to the west of the way you an' me came. He ain't had the nerve to tackle it by his lones.
But we can pull it off, the three of us.
Whiskers is the real goods, but he's mostly loco, just the same."

"Who's Whiskers?" Smoke queried.
"Why, he's the top geezer. He's the Scotcher. He's gettin' old, an' he's sure asleep now, but he'll see you tomorrow an' show you clear as print what a measly shrimp you are on his stompin' grounds. These grounds belong to him. You got to get that into your noodle. They ain't never been explored nor nothin', an' they're his an' he won't let you forget it. He's got about 20,000 square miles of huntin' country here all his own. He's the white Indian, him an' the skit."

"Huh! Don't look at me that way Walt till you see her. Some looker, an' all white, like her dad—he's Whiskers. An' say, caribou! A hundred thousand of good runnin' meat in the herd an' ten thousand wolves an' cats a-followin' an' livin' off the stragglers an' the leavin's. The herd's movin' to the east, an' we'll be followin' 'em any day now."

"Here comes Whiskers, lookin' like he's goin' somewhere," Shorty whispered.

It was morning, and the bachelors were squatting over a breakfast of caribou meat. Smoke glanced up and saw a small and slender man, skin clad like any savage, but unmistakably white, striding in advance of a team and a following of a dozen Indians. Bushy whiskers, yellowish gray and stained by camp smoke, concealed most of the face, but failed wholly to conceal the gaunt, almost cadaverous, cheeks.

"How do you do?" the man said, slipping a mitten and holding out his bare hand. "My name is Snass."
"Mine's Bellew," Smoke returned, feeling peculiarly disconcerted as he gazed into the keen, searching black eyes.

"Getting plenty to eat, I see. Rough rations, but we don't starve often. And it's more natural than the hand reared meat of the cities."

"I see you don't like the cities," Smoke laughed in order to be saying something and was immediately startled by the transformation Snass underwent.

Quite like a sensitive plant, the man's entire form seemed to wilt and quiver.
Then the recoil, tense and savage, con-centered in the eyes, in which appeared a hatred that screamed of immeasurable pain. He turned abruptly away and then, recollecting himself, remarked casually over his shoulder:

"I'll see you later, Mr. Bellew. The caribou are moving east, and I'm going ahead to pick out a location. You'll all come on tomorrow."

Later on in the morning Smoke went for a stroll through the camp, busy with its primitive pursuits. A big body of hunters had just returned, and the men were scattering to their various fires. Women and children were departing with dogs harnessed to empty toboggan sleds, and women and children and dogs were hauling sleds heavy with meat fresh from the killing and already frozen. Furs and soft tanned leather clad all alike. Boys passed with bows in their hands and quivers of bone barbed arrows, and many a skinning knife of bone or stone Smoke saw in belts or neck hanging sheaths.

Segregated in the heart of the camp, Smoke came upon what was evidently Snass' fire. Though temporary in every detail, it was solidly constructed and was on a large scale. A great heap of bales of skins and outfit was piled on a scaffold out of reach of the dogs.
A large canvas fly, almost half tent, sheltered the sleeping and living quarters.

To one side was a silk tent—the sort favored by explorers and wealthy big game hunters. Smoke had never seen such a tent and stepped closer. As he stood looking the flaps parted and a young woman came out. So quickly did she move, so abruptly did she appear, that the effect on Smoke was as that of an apparition. He seemed to have the same effect on her, and for a long moment they gazed at each other.

She was dressed entirely in skins,
but such skins and such magnificently beautiful fur work Smoke had never dreamed of. Her parka, the hood thrown back, was of some strange fur of palest silver. The mukluks, with worn-in hide soles, were composed of the silver padded feet of many lynxes.
The long gauntleted mittens, the tassels at the knees, all the varied furs of the costume, were pale silver that shimmered in the frosty light, and out of this shimmering figure, poised on a slender, delicate neck, lifted her head the rosy face blond as the eyes were blue, the ears like two pink shells, the light chestnut hair touched with frost dust and coruscating frost glints.

All this and more, as in a dream,
Smoke saw; then, recollecting himself, his hand fumbled for his cap. At the same moment the wonder stare in the girl's eyes passed into a smile, and she slipped a mitten and extended her hand.

"How do you do?" she murmured

FRIDAY, MARCH 12, 1915

We have now nearly completed twenty-five years of active life in the newspaper and job printing business and with this number retire from some of its activities and responsibilities. In the earlier part of our experiences there came many changes and different conditions but we will not review those here.

It is ten years since we bought the business of the Gazette Publishing Co. and took upon ourselves the responsibilities, pleasures, and at times features which were not so much a pleasure, but on the whole the pleasures have far outweighed the displeasures and in retiring we most sincerely thank business men and the public at large for their liberal support and patronage.

Naturally an inquiring public may say, why leave it? We are not entirely leaving it but there are some features which are more adapted to a younger man and he, if the right man, is better adapted to them. Another reason is, there are several things we would like to do but can not and still devote the time required for this. Notably among these is our abstract of Weymouth Town Records of which we have completed the first two hundred years and still have nearly a hundred left untouched and several other things of which we will say more later.

We have sold the business to Norton F. Pratt, who has been connected with the work for several years, and on Monday the 15th, he will become sole proprietor of the Gazette & Transcript Publishing Co., and no doubt he will do as we have done—give the best there is in him to make the paper a desirable visitor to every home in town—and we can only ask for him what has been given us; a liberal patronage and support in making the Old and Reliable Gazette a continued success.

Nelson—Olsen.

March the fifth, at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Persencies of North 6th street, Grand Forks, North Dakota, occurred the marriage of Miss Hanna Olsen formerly of East Braintree and Mr. Carl Nelson. Miss Anna Benson was bridesmaid and Fred Benson, best man. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk with lace veil and carried a bouquet of brides roses.

In the evening a wedding dinner and reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Benson of Honeyford, N. D. Many friends of the bridal couple attended to offer their congratulations. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will make their home on the groom's farm near Honeyford, N. D. The bride has been a resident of East Braintree for some years, and the groom, who is a brother of Peter Nelson, was formerly in the employ of A. J. Richards & Son and went west and purchased a farm some months ago.

NO DIFFERENCE.

The Proof is Here the Same as Everywhere.

For those who seek relief from kidney backache, weak kidneys, bladder ills, Doan's Kidney Pills offer hope of relief and the proof is here in Weymouth, the same as everywhere. Weymouth people have used Doan's and Weymouth people recommend Doan's, the kidney remedy used in America for fifty years. Why suffer? Why run the risk of dangerous kidney ills—fatal Bright's disease. Here's Weymouth proof. Investigate it.

Alfred Howe, 177 Commercial street, Weymouth, says: "I had severe pains across my back. The passages of the kidney secretions were scanty and painful. A neighbor recommended Doan's Kidney Pills and I began taking them. One box made a great improvement. The passages of the kidney secretions became regular, the pains in my back disappeared. Four boxes rid me of the trouble. I am never without Doan's Kidney Pills in the house, and don't believe I would be alive today if it hadn't been for them. You may continue to use my former endorsement of this remedy."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Howe had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Screwless Door Lock.

A screwless lock which cannot be picked from without is an invention to carry comfort to timid housewives. This lock resembles a clamp with a tongue to fit into the lock plate of the door jamb, held by a thumbscrew. This device may be used on window sashes, dumb waiters and transoms as well as on doors.

Insects as Food.

The stag beetle, a wood-boring insect, is used in some parts of the world, especially in the mountains of Italy, as a food. An Australian species of butterfly, called by the bushmen "buging," is a standard article of food there. They are caught clinging to the trees in the Bugony mountains, and great fires are made literally to cook them off. They are raked from the embers and ground into a pulp or flour for cake baking.

W. R. C. Notes.

The executive board of W. R. C. 102 desires to express thanks to the gentlemen voters of Weymouth for their courtesy during the lunch hour rush on Monday, last, when over 200 were served. The change in the place of serving caused some confusion, but the patrons were very patient and where wrong checks were given corrections were made by the gentlemen. Thank you.

The Tuesday afternoon meeting of W. R. C. 102 was unusually well attended. Many who have been ill, were present once more. Four candidates were initiated and the corps is rapidly approaching the 300 membership mark.

The committees for Good of the Order and Birth-months reported good work done and much enthusiasm shown.

One pleasant feature of the records of the afternoon was the reading that the old frigate "Constitution" has a new flag to replace the old one.

It is a glorious fact that there are 14, 452 loyal women banded together in F. C. and L. in the relief work in the many corps of the U. S.

The Tuesday meeting was followed by a supper and delightful entertainment and many veterans were present.

The next meeting, Tuesday afternoon March 30, will be followed by a home supper an observance of Red Letter Day, and a reception to Department Inspector, Mrs. Carrie F. Loring.

Ought to Paint.

I ought to have painted last year, but I hated to pay $2 a gallon.

I've got to paint this year; I'll take a little more paint; I suppose one gallon in 10; and a little more work, I suppose 1 day in 10.

My job would have cost last year about $50; it is going to cost this year $55.

$5 gone. I suppose it'll be the same again, if I wait again.

What if paint goes down to $1.75 a gallon? $2 50 on the job!

I shan't wait; what a fool I was!

Town Meeting.

be followed by Rev. Mr. Hyde, who went on record as in favor of the schools and new school buildings when needed but didn't think that a 14 room school-house was the thing for any ward as he was not in favor of putting so many children of all ages in one structure. A. W. Davis next made his initial speech of the day and called for a vote on the question. James Reed spoke and then Mr. O'Brien's motion of amendment for the 6 room building was put and carried 167 to 162. This was at 2:16. Mr. Cuniff moved at this time a further amendment that the sum of $85,000 be raised and appropriated to carry out the building of the 6 room building. Mr. Sheehy came to the time with the opinion that the town was making a mistake in erecting as small a building as 6 rooms at this time and favored a 8 room structure. Cate next read a substitute motion for the original recommendation of the appropriation committee by substituting the sum of $85,000 in place of $79,000 for carrying out provisions of the article. Mr. Sheehy at this point moved that Mr. O'Brien's motion be changed to 8 rooms instead of six. Mr. Cuniff wished to leave the matter up to the Ward 3 contingent present to decide between a 6 and 8 room building but Geo. Keene came on to his feet with a jump and expressed the sentiment of a large number present that it was time to "cut out" the ward business and get together as a whole. Mr. O'Brien gracefully gave his 6 room idea over for the 8 room proposition and after several minutes more of arguing the sum of $43,000 was voted for a new eight room school house in Ward 3, with the school committee to act as a building committee. The vote passed unanimously 372 to 0. This was at 2:30 after three hours of debate on this one question and the end was not yet! Mr. Cuniff moved that the School Committee members be required to furnish a bond not to exceed the appropriation. Mr. Sheehy and Mr. Gardner spoke on the subject and then O'Brien caused a laugh by saying that he "would trust his pocket-book in the hands of the school committee even though there wasn't anything in it," but he favored bonding the contractor. The motion to bond the contractor for $85,000 was carried with a will. Mr. Bradford Hawes moved that the school committee be empowered to sell the Tufts building and Mr. O'Brien suggested that the words "at public auction" be inserted in this motion. Mr. Cushing amended to include the Lincoln school. Mr. B. Hawes further amended the motion to include land of Tufts lot also. P. E. Sullivan moved that the buildings and land not be sold until the new structure was completed. Mr. Hyde and Mr. Cuniff spoke again and then the vote to sell the Tufts building was carried. Bradford Hawes moved that the school committee have authority to purchase a new lot of land to put the new building if they (the school committee) thought necessary. This motion prevailed. At 2:55 the Ward 3 school house article was covered and Article 10 taken with it was passed as recommended by the appropriation committee.

Article 12. On petition of the Lovell's Corner Improvement association: To see if the Town of Weymouth will vote to raise and appropriate the sum of One Hundred (100) Dollars for the purpose of building a fence on the boundary line between the land of Frank Shorman and the land owned by the Town of Weymouth on which the Pratt schoolhouse stands. Referred to the School committee for action.

Article 13 voted to take up articles 79, 80, 82, 83, 86, 87, 88 and 89 with this article, the entire subject matter of the articles concerning highways, townways and the removal of snow. Voted to raise and appropriate $13,800, appropriate railway and excise taxes, $800 for bridges and $500 for snow, and that articles 79, 80, 82, 83, 86, 87, 88 and 89 cost of, to be taken from the regular street appropriation.

Article 14 in regard to street watering and oiling, raised and appropriated $2,000 for the purpose.

Article 15, for relief and support of the poor, raised and appropriated $14,000 and further appropriated $2,000 for this work.

Article 16, pertaining to the relief of disabled soldiers and seamen, and for their families, raised and appropriated $3,000.

Article 17, State Aid and Military Aid, etc., raised and appropriated $200 and further appropriated $700 for this purpose.

Article 18. To see if the town will accept the provisions of Chapter 576 of the Acts of 1907, Sections 102 to 105 inclusive in relation to establishing a municipal buildings insurance fund. No action taken.

Article 19. To see what sum of money if any the town will vote to raise and appropriate for the purpose of establishing a municipal buildings insurance fund. No action taken.

Article 20. To see what sum of money the town will vote to raise and appropriate for the support of the Fire Department. Article 64 taken with the above article.

Mr. O'Brien was first on the floor to discuss his pet hobby, the Fire Department situation. He unflinchingly attacked some of the doings of the Fire Engineers, individually and as a board and caused considerable amusement with his fun on this question. In response to a request for information Mr. Cate said that the appropriation as made by the appropriation committee did not cover the expense of a permanent man for the ward 3 house. The article was carried as recommended by the appropriation committee, viz: To raise and appropriate $10,000, $1,000 of this for Fire Warden, and $450 for a heating plant in the ward 3 engine house.

Article 21. In regard to the town instructing the Fire Engineers to sell apparatus not needed. B. B. Worster moved that the article be amended by inserting the words "with the approval of the Selectmen". Chief of the Department W. W. Pratt said the department had an opportunity at this time to sell several pieces of apparatus if the town wished. Mr. Cuniff desired to know what and how much apparatus the Engineers desired to put on the market. Pratt claimed the Board didn't exactly know at this time. In view of this situation, Mr. Cuniff moved the matter be postponed until some future meeting, and that the Engineers report at this meeting. M. E. Hawes got the floor and said he earnestly hoped the motion would not prevail, as "a future town meeting" gave the Engineers and Selectmen too much latitude. Mr. Worster spoke on the matter and then R. B. Worster spoke with much feeling on the matter and wound up by saying that it was proposed to sell the former Ward 5 chemical, two steamers, and three horse carriages, which the town will not have use for again. After more discussion on the question it was voted to indefinitely postpone action on this article.

Article 22. In which the Fire Engineers desired the authority to disband such companies they think advisable, it was voted to postpone this article also.

Article 23. Passed without action.

Article 24. Passed without action.

Article 27. $750 was raised and appropriated to the maintenance of a public reading room at the Fogg library.

Article 28. To see if the town will raise and appropriate $2,500 for the purpose of refunding the Sussanah Hunt Stetson of that amount and provide that the same shall be invested as a permanent fund. Voted so to do.

Article 31. To see what sum of money the town will raise and appropriate for printing and advertising. It was voted to take up article 32 with this article. Article 32 read as follows:

Article 32. To see if the town will vote to cause the report of Louis A. Cook of his visit to Weymouth, England, to be printed and raise and appropriate any sum of money therefor. $2,100 was voted for article 31 and article 32 was referred to the Selectmen for action.

gravely, with a queer, delightful accent, her voice as silvery as the furs she wore.

Smoke could only mumble phrases that were awkwardly reminiscent of his best society manner.

"I am glad to see you," she went on slowly and gropingly, her face a ripple of smiles. "My English you will please excuse. It is not good. I am English like you," she gravely assured him. "My father he is Scotch. My mother she is dead. She was French and English and a little Indian too. Her father was a great man in the Hudson Bay company. B-r-r-r! It is cold. Let us go to the fire and talk. My name is Labiskwee. What is your name?"

And so Smoke came to know Labiskwee, the daughter of Snass, whom Snass called Margaret.

"Snass is not my father's name," she informed Smoke. "Snass is only an Indian name."

Much Smoke learned that day and in the days that followed. These were real wild Indians, the ones Anton had encountered and escaped from long years before. But strive as he would, Smoke could get no clew to Snass' history in the days before he came to live in the northern wilds. Educated he was, yet in all the intervening years what had happened in the world he knew not. Nor did he show desire to know.

Nor could Labiskwee help Smoke with earlier information. She had been born on the hunting grounds. Her mother had lived for six years after. Her mother had been very beautiful—the only white woman Labiskwee had ever seen. She said this wistfully, and wistfully in a thousand ways she showed that she knew of the great outside world on which her father had closed the door. But this knowledge was secret. She had early learned that mention of it threw her father into a rage.

Anton had told a squaw of her mother and that her mother had been a daughter of a high official in the Hudson Bay company. Later the squaw had told Labiskwee. But her mother's name she had never learned.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Love of Labiskwee.

"YOUNG" the first intelligent man we've had," Snass complimented Smoke one night by the fire, "except old Four Eyes. The Indians named him so. He wore glasses and was short-sighted. He was a professor of zoology. My young men picked him up strayed from an expedition on the upper Porcupine.

"He was intelligent, yes; but he was also a fool. That was his weakness—straying. He knew geology, though, and working in metals. Over on the Luskwa, where there's coal, we have several creditable hand forges he made. He repaired our guns and taught the young men how. He died last year, and we really missed him. Strayed—that's how it happened—froze to death within a mile of camp."

It was on the same night that Snass said to Smoke:

"You'd better pick out a wife and have a fire of your own. You will be more comfortable than with those young bucks. The maidens' fires—a sort of feast of the virgins, you know—are not lighted until full summer and the salmon, but I can give orders earlier if you say the word."

Smoke laughed and shook his head. "Remember," Snass concluded quietly.

by. "Anton is the only one that ever got away. He was lucky, unusually lucky."

Her father had a will of iron. Labiskwee told Smoke. Everybody feared him. He was terrible when angry. There were the Porcupines. It was through them and through the Luskwa that Snass traded his skins at the posts and got his supplies of ammunition and tobacco. He was always fair, but the chief of the Porcupines began to cheat, and after Snass had warned him twice he burned his log village, and over a dozen of the Porcupines were killed in the fight. But there was no more cheating. Once when she was a little girl there was one white man killed while trying to escape. No, her father did not do it, but he gave the order to the young men. No Indian ever disobeyed her father.

And the more Smoke learned from her the more the mystery of Snass deepened.

"And tell me if it is true," the girl was saying, "that there was a man and a woman whose names were Paolo and Francesca and who greatly loved each other?"

Smoke nodded.

"Four Eyes told me all about it," she beamed happily. "And so he didn't make it up, after all. Then there is Tristan and Iselt, two iseltis. It was very sad. But I should like to love that way. Do all the young men and women in the world do that? They don't here. They just get married. They don't seem to have time."

"I am English, and I will never marry an Indian. Would you? That is why I have not lighted my maiden's fire. Some of the young men are bothering father to make me do it. Labash is one of them. He is a great hunter. And Mahkook comes around singing songs. He is funny. Tonight, if you come by my tent after dark, you will hear him singing out in the cold. But father says I can do as I please, and so I shall not light my fire. You see when a girl makes up her mind to get married that is the way she lets young men know. And how do you know when you are in love—like Paolo and Francesca, I mean?"

Smoke was disconcerted by the clear gaze of her blue eyes. "Why, they say," he stammered, "those who are in love say it, that love is dearer than life. When one finds out that he or she likes somebody better than everybody else in the world—why, then, they know they are in love. You just know it; that's all."

"Once we hit out we'll sure have some tall runnin'," Shorty said dimly.

"The place is a big trap," Smoke agreed.

From the crest of a bald knob they gazed out over Snass' snowy domain.

"What's eatin' me is Danny McCan," Shorty confided to Smoke. "He's a weak brother on any trail. But he swears he knows the way out to the westward, and so we got to pull up with him or you'll sure get yours. It's a-comin' to you straight down the pike."

"What is it?"

"You ain't heard the news? The bachelors told me. They just got the word. Tonight it comes off, though it's months ahead of the calendar."

"I'm waiting to hear."

"Well, Danny's wife just told the bachelors. An' the bachelors told me, of course, that the maidens' fires is due to be lighted tonight. That's all. Now how do you like it?"

"I don't get your drift, Shorty."

"Don't, eh? Why, it's plain open and shut. They's a skirt after you, an' that skirt is goin' to light a fire, an' that skirt's name is Labiskwee. Oh, I've been watchin' her watch you when you ain't lookin'. She ain't never lighted her fire. She said she wouldn't marry an Indian. An' now, when she lights her fire, it's a cinch it's my poor old friend Smoke."

"It sounds like a syllogism," Smoke said with a sinking heart, reviewing Labiskwee's actions of the past several days.

"Cinch is shorter to pronounce," Shorty returned. "An' that's always the way—just as we're workin' up our getaway along comes a skirt to complicate everything. Hey! Listen!"

Three ancient squaws had halted midway between the bachelors' camp and the camp of McCan, and the oldest was declaiming in shrill falsetto: "Labiskwee, the daughter of Snass, the Rainmaker, the great chief, lights her first maidens' fire tonight. Maka, the daughter of Owits, the Wolf Runner."

The recital ran through the names of a dozen maidens, and then the three heralds tottered on their way to make announcement at the next fires.

The bachelors, who had sworn youthful oaths to speak to no maiden, were uninterested in the approaching ceremony, and to show their disdain they made preparations for immediate departure on a mission set them by Snass and upon which they had planned to start the following morning. Not satisfied with the old hunters' estimates of the caribou, Snass had decided that the run was split. The task set the bachelors was to scout to the north and west in quest of the second division of the great herd.

Smoke, troubled by Labiskwee's fire lighting, announced that he would accompany the bachelors. But first he talked with Shorty and with McCan. "You be there on the third day," Smoke, Shorty said. "We'll have the outfit an' the dogs."

"But remember," Smoke cautioned, "if there is any slipup in meeting me you keep on going and get out to the Yukon. That's flat. If you make it you can come back for me in the summer. If I get the chance I'll make it and come back for you."

McCan, standing by his fire, indicated with his eyes a rugged mountain where the high western range outjuted on the open country.

"That's the one," he said, "a small stream on the south side. We go up it. On the third day you meet us. We'll pass by on the third day. Anywhere you tap that stream you'll meet us or our trail."

But the chance did not come to Smoke on the third day. The bachelors had changed the direction of their scout, and while Shorty and McCan plodded up the stream with their dogs Smoke and the bachelors were sixty miles to the northeast picking up the trail of the second caribou herd.

Several days later they came back to the big camp. A squaw ceased from walling by a fire and darted up to Smoke. Harsh tongued, with bitter, venomous eyes, she cursed him, waving her hands toward a silent, fur wrapped form that still lay on the sled which had hauled it in.

What had happened Smoke could only guess, and as he came to McCan's fire he was prepared for a second cursing. Instead, he saw McCan himself industriously chewing a strip of caribou meat.

"I'm not a fightin' man," he whiningly explained. "But Shorty got away, though they're still after him. He surely put up a fight. He plugged two bucks that'll get around all right. An' he croaked one square through the chest."

"Yes, I know," Smoke answered. "I just met the widow."

"Old Snass'll be wantin' to see you," McCan added. "Them's his orders. Soon as you come in you was to go to his fire. I ain't squealed. You don't know nothin'. Keep that in mind. Shorty went off on his own hook along with me."

At Snass' fire Smoke found Labiskwee. She met him with eyes that shone with such softness and tenderness as to frighten him.

"I'm glad you didn't try to run away," she said. "You see, I— She hesitated, but her eyes didn't drop. They swam with a light unmistakable. "I lighted my fire, and of course it was for you. It has happened. I like you better than everybody else in the world. Better than my father I love. It is very strange. I love as Francesca loved, as Iselt loved. Old Four Eyes spoke true. Indians do not love this way. But my eyes are blue, and I am white. We are white, you and I."

Smoke had never been proposed to in his life, and he was unable to meet the situation. Worse, it was not even a proposal. His acceptance was taken for granted. So thoroughly was it all arranged in Labiskwee's mind, so warm was the light in her eyes that he was amazed that she did not throw her arms around him and rest her head on his shoulder. Then he realized, despite her candor of love, that she did not know the pretty ways of love. Among the primitive savages such ways did not obtain. She had had no chance to learn.

She prattled on, chanting the happy burden of her love, while he strove to grip himself in the effort somehow to wound her with the truth. And then Snass strode in to the fire through the falling snowflakes, and Smoke's opportunity was lost.

"Good evening," Snass burred gruffly. "Your partner has made a mess of it. I am glad you had better sense. You might tell me what's happened," Smoke urged.

The flash of white teeth through the stained beard was not pleasant. "Certainly, I'll tell you. Your partner has killed one of my people. That sniveling shrimp, McCan, deserted at the first shot. He'll never run away again. But my hunters have got your partner in the mountains, and they'll get him. He'll never make the Yukon basin. As for you, from now on you sleep at my fire. And there'll be no more scouting with the young men. I shall have my eye on you."

Smoke's new situation at Snass' fire was embarrassing. He saw more of Labiskwee than ever. In its sweetness and innocence the frankness of her love was terrible. Her glances were love glances. Every look was a caress. A score of times he nerved himself to tell her of Joy Gastell, and a score of times he discovered that he was a coward.

The damnable part of it was that Labiskwee was so delightful. She was good to look upon. Despite the hurt to his self esteem of every moment spent with her, he pleased in every such moment. For the first time in his life he was really learning woman, and so clear was Labiskwee's soul, so appalling in its innocence and ignorance, that he could not misread a line of it. All the pristine goodness of her sex was in her, uncluttered by the conventionalities of knowledge or the deceit of self protection.

And Smoke learned about himself. He remembered back to all he knew of Joy Gastell and he knew that he loved her. Yet he delighted in Labiskwee. And what was this feeling of delight but love? He could demean it by no less a name. Love it was. Love it must be. And he was shocked to the roots of his soul by the discovery of this polygamous strain in his nature.

"There must be many women in the world," she said one day. "And women like men. Many women must have liked you. Tell me."

He did not reply.

"Tell me," she insisted, "is it not so?"

"I have never married," he evaded.

"And there is no one else? No other Iselt out there beyond the mountain tains?"

Then it was that Smoke knew himself a coward. He lied. Reluctantly he did it, but he lied. He shook his head with a slow, indulgent smile, and in his face was more of fondness than he dreamed as he noted Labiskwee's swift joy transfiguration.

He excused himself to himself. His reasoning was deceitful beyond dispute, and yet he was not Spartan enough to strike this child woman a quivering heart stroke.

Snass, too, was a perturbing factor in the problem. Little escaped his keen black eyes, and he spoke significantly. "No man cares to see his daughter married," he said to Smoke. "At least, no man of imagination. Just the same in the natural order of life Margaret must marry some time."

A pause fell. There was a burst of chiding and silvery laughter from Labiskwee's tent, where she played with a new caught wolf cub. A spasm of pain twitched Snass' face.

"I can stand it," he muttered grimly. "Margaret must be married, and it is my fortune, and hers, that you are here. I had little hopes of Four Eyes. McCan was so hopeless I turned him over to a squaw who had lighted her fire twenty seasons. If it hadn't been you it would have been an Indian. Labash might have become the father of my grandchildren."

And then Labiskwee came from her tent to the fire, the wolf cub in her arms, drawn, as by a magnet, to gaze upon the man in her eyes the love that art had never taught her to hide.

WHEN MEMORY WENT OUT

A Fine Piece of Acting That Accomplished Nothing

By GARNET WARREN

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

An alertness came to the specialist's eyes as he looked at the man seated before him.

"As bad as that?" said he.

"Is that bad?" asked the man quickly. "Listen, doctor; there have been moments in the past month or two when my thoughts and the events going on about me seem to have merged one in the other, when my memory of even yesterday's happenings reasserts itself only after a fierce struggle. I seem to have felt my acuteness slipping away from me."

The specialist interrupted.

"Symptoms that every expert knows as the border country of aphasia. In fact, you have every indication of that particular sort of nervous breakdown which means a total obliteration of memory. You have drawn too deeply on your capital of nervous force—you've worked or played too hard—and nature offers you just one chance to come back, and that is to come back to nature, to get next to the earth and in the open air."

He gave some further directions, upon which John Farrell departed.

He walked slowly along the street, a nervous appearing man, of fragile features, broad forehead and dark eyes.

He paid a social visit that afternoon, another at night, discussing at each the possibility of an early visit to the country, but without any particular indication of that nervous condition which had been the reason of his visit to the specialist.

Next morning saw him in the vestibule of one of the city's largest hotels, seated comfortably in one of its deep padded chairs, and reading a newspaper. He read casually for a time, in the manner of a man relaxed, but on an instant the same peculiar tenseness which had characterized his manner at the specialist's seemed to take possession of him.

He mechanically raised a hand to his forehead and, dropping his paper, moved slowly toward the marble countered office at the further end of the vestibule.

A clerk, unoccupied at the instant, looked at him, anticipative of a question. John Farrell paused for an instant, his face marked with the same intense effort to remember something. "Where—where am I?" he asked at length.

"Hotel Ambrosia," said the clerk, eying him. "Do you want anything; aren't you feeling right?"

"Hotel—Ambrosia," repeated Farrell slowly—"er—what city is this?"

"Say, what's the matter with you?" asked the clerk, peering forward at the other in a quick, puzzled way—"don't you know New York when you're in it?"

The attention of others about them was drawn at the peculiar intensity of

"HE READ HIS PAPER IN THE MANNER OF A MAN RELAXED"

the clerk's expression, and they moved close with staring eyes, as Farrell's notice fixed upon a small, rolling calendar, in which the day of the month was clearly visible, with the gilded figures of the year atop.

"What's that?" he suddenly exclaimed—"what's that date?"

The clerk cast off the sudden suspicion of his manner as if instinctively. And with the quick judgment of his kind he had grasped the plight of the man before him.

"That's the date, old man," he answered in a quiet voice; "that's the day of the month and the year."

"New York January, 1912," repeated the man two or three times, rubbing his head. "I've never been in New York in my life and and it was 1906."

I swear, when I bought a paper last night in then I was in Frisco—

"Aphasia," said one of the hotel detectives to the clerk, in a low voice. "Telephone the house doctor, Jim—and the hospital."

The clerk obeyed, while the man puzzled over the date.

That afternoon another nerve specialist was asking him questions as to symptoms, but with small results. The man declared he felt all right, only he couldn't remember how he came to the hotel, or how he happened to be in New York, or clearly what his name was.

He had an idea that it might be George Brandeis, but the initials "J. F." were marked on his hat and clothes, and there was nothing further to identify him; so the expert was forced back to the man's actual memories—of San Francisco, prior to 1906.

He had remembered living in a destroyed section of the city, and that on the night preceding his loss of memory he had gone to the theater which he named, and that on his return from supper rather late he had been set upon in the streets by two men. After that he was conscious of nothing.

The specialist listened intently, an enthusiastic at the discovery of an unusual case, and was later willing to talk at length to a reporter, whose tip had come through the hotel. Next morning a front page story with picturesque headlines appeared in all the papers, giving exact details of the strange affair and a precise description of the forgetful man.

In that august sanctuary known as headquarters, sitting at his roll top desk in his specific division of it, an eminent detective official sat next morning perusing official reports, daily correspondence and his morning news papers.

He observed the aphasia case and skimmed it lightly, for on only special occasions had such cases been of special professional interest. He read however, the description of the man before his attention left the matter, and his eye sought out from the details of a hundred other stories the one or two suggestive happenings which opened up for him a line of speculation.

And then abruptly his attention became riveted. His eyes were fixed upon a story emphasized by large display. That it was of a robbery was of itself unimportant to one who reviewed robberies daily.

That the victim was an eminent woman in society was a fact familiar enough to be unexciting. But that the case possessed a marked fascination for him was apparent from the extreme absorption of his manner as he read the details of the theft.

The affair itself was simple. Mrs. Malcolm Courtenay of the highest order of society had obviously and unintentionally provided the cue herself by giving an interview to a reporter at the suit of her hotel, in full view of a disorder of her incalculably valued jewels, which lay carelessly scattered on the table of the anteroom in which they talked and by making some humorous comment on her tendency to leave them about—all of which the reporter faithfully reproduced.

The result was obvious. It had provided the robber with an idea. He had clearly watched her rooms and discovered a favorable time of absence, both on her own part and on that of her servant, had entered her suit, the door of which was unimaginably left open, had taken her incalculably valued necklace of pearls, which she had carelessly left loosely in an open drawer of her dressing table, and had made good his retreat.

Not without, however, being seen, for on inquiry it developed that at the time the suit was deserted another guest on the same corridor had seen a well dressed man, whom at the time the guest had taken for an ordinary caller, departing.

It was, however, the description of this robber that the eminent detective's whole attention was given and which caused the mask of his impassive face to be turned for once to undeniable surprise.

"The man is declared by the guest who saw his departure from Mrs. Malcolm Courtenay's suit," the report declared, "to be slight. He had a white puff necktie, dark clothes and some peculiar variety of walking stick which appeared similar to but was not of itself bamboo."

The detective whistled thoughtfully to himself and turned back to the loss of memory story upon the first page, which on this occasion, however, he read carefully.

Particularly did he give attention to the description of the man who had lost himself. He, too, had a white puff necktie; he, too, had dark clothes, and he possessed a walking stick made from the polished backbone of a shark—a walking stick which has a distinct similarity to one of bamboo.

Then he thought again, lit a cigar and delivered some orders to a subordinate which took that official with a warrant for arrest in his pocket to the observation ward, where John Farrell received the scientist.

The arrest of John Farrell precipitated one of the most exciting news paper discussions which has appeared in the annals of inventive journalism. Columns of speculations were written as to the moral responsibility of such a criminal, columns of theories deduced as to the relationship between aphasia and criminal instinct.

And through it all, in the face of the third degree and all the ingenuities of prosecution, George Brandeis or "J. F." presented an empty face and was able neither to affirm his innocence nor to deny the charge. He simply stated, shaking his head in a puzzled way, that he could not remember.

In the meantime everything was done to find the whereabouts of the missing necklace, but without result, and the day of the trial dawned with a complication of prophecies and theories as to the outcome.

The district attorney himself appeared to prosecute, being convinced that the aphasia was a clever simulation.

For three days the experts testified, and then came the climax of a climatic case.

"Brandeis" had been called to give evidence as to his condition immediately after the hotel clerk and the spectators of the hotel vestibule had testified. He had answered the first questions with simple directness, proclaiming the utter blank of his mind for six years of his life.

And then suddenly in the midst of a question he started up from the witness chair, rubbing his forehead, while the spectators eyed him amid a dead stillness.

"I REMEMBER EVERYTHING NOW," HE SAID ABRUPTLY

"I remember now—I remember everything now," he said abruptly. "I am not guilty, and I can prove that I am not guilty."

His counsel interrupted him then, gaining an adjournment to consult him. In half an hour they appeared again in court, and gained a further adjournment, that they might produce some most important witnesses.

Next day they did so, and the case was settled beyond the whisper of doubt. Three reputable citizens who had known John Farrell proved an unquestioned alibi. At the time the robbery was being committed he had been visiting them at a distant suburb.

They were indeed the people he had called upon after his visit to the specialist. So John Farrell was discharged and was congratulated, though the mystery of the necklace was not cleared up.

John Farrell, however, once free and having played for several weeks a lucrative vaudeville engagement, journeyed to the west, though it did not seem from his appearance that there would be any recrudescence of his nervous condition. He stopped at San Francisco, and there paid a visit.

It was to a comfortable house that he went, and he knocked confidently and was admitted. A rather small, nervous looking man faced him.

"Hello, Jim," said John Farrell in greeting.

The other nodded, smiling. "What do you think?" he replied. "I've thrown my puff necktie away and dropped my sharkbone walking stick at the bottom of the sea. I got rid of those right away after."

"After you got what Mrs. Malcolm Courtenay carelessly left around," continued Farrell. "And, say," he went on, "how about me for dopping up a beautiful scheme to fix the attention of every one on me while you got clear away and collected the cash? And now about my end?"

The other shook his head. "There isn't any end," he said.

"No end?" interrupted Farrell. The other held up his hand again.

"The necklace was fake, the pearls were the wrong kind," said the man slowly.

"You're a liar. You're trying to double cross me," burst in Farrell. "You think because it's my first job you can do me up?"

"I wouldn't double cross you, John," said the latter steadily. "I felt like you do myself when the man told me they were the slickest manufactured pearls he'd ever seen."

They momentarily paused at the approach of footsteps, which briskly ascended the stone steps in front. Then the swish of an evening newspaper was heard as it was pushed beneath the door.

Farrell was looking down, and his eyes mechanically fixed themselves upon the paper as it lay outspread before them. Then suddenly, with an oath, he pointed to it.

"You were right," he said; "the pearls were fake!" A headline, heavily lettered, filled the width of the page. "Mrs. Malcolm Courtenay to go on Stage!"

Congregational Church East Weymouth

The annual reunion, supper and business meeting of the Congregational church was held in the dining room of the church on Wednesday evening.

The supper was served under the direction of Mrs. J. H. Libby with the following committee as aids: Mrs. Edward T. Ford, Mrs. James Ford, Mrs. E. E. Orr, Mrs. Joseph Sampson, Mrs. T. H. Emerson, Mrs. Frank H. Holmes, Mrs. E. P. Hunt, Mrs. Ralph Haskins, Mrs. Andrew Strout, Mrs. C. D. Gib on, Mrs. Lizzie Abrams, Mrs. Henry Hawkes, Miss Grace Mitchell, Miss Josie Cummings, Miss Addie M. Canterbury, Miss Adele Rix, Miss Susie Humphrey, Miss Lillian Keene, Miss Mildred Newcomb, Miss Alice Emerson.

The business meeting, with Rev. Edward T. Ford D. D., as chairman followed the supper.

In the absence of the clerk Wm. M. Reamy, on account of the serious illness of his mother, John A. McFann was chosen clerk pro-tem and read the report. The present membership of the church is 226, (70 male members and 156 female). There has been 18 additions during the year 12 by letter and 6 by profession of faith.

The Sunday school report was by assistant superintendent Emerson R. Dizer and showed a prosperous year. Miss Grace Mitchell followed with a statement of the work of the Junior department in which there are ten classes and in the absence of Miss Reamy, Mrs. Sampson reported for the Primary department and also the Cradle roll which is under her own supervision.

Norman Dizer, secretary, gave a very interesting report of the Christian Endeavor Society work for the year, among other achievements they captured the district banner for the 6th consecutive term for the highest per cent of attendance. Mrs. C. E. Stewart reported for the J. C. E. now on its first year with a cheering outlook.

Mrs. J. E. Sampson reported for the Ladies' Social circle which under the management of Mrs. F. E. Thompson has had most successful year contributing over $700 to the society as well as to charitable objects outside.

Scout Master McFann replied for the Boy Scouts, Troop 2; Emerson R. Dizer for the Goodfellowship club; Mrs. E. P. Hunt, Golden Rule Circle, King's Daughters; Mrs. C. Will Bailey, Inasmuch Circle and Mrs. Frank Abraham for the Watchful circle, all of which showed these several organizations to be on a sound basis and with a good year's work.

Officers of the church elected for the ensuing year were Wm. M. Reamy, clerk and treasurer; Miss Janet A. Harlow, Miss Adeline M. Canterbury and Mrs. Henry R. Hawkes, standing committee; Rev. Edward T. Ford, John A. McFann, James A. Melville, Mrs. T. H. Emerson and Mrs. W. M. Tirrell, committee on benevolence; Charles B. Cushing, deacon for four years and James A. Melville, deacon for three years.

The pastor gave a very interesting talk on the work of the year just closed and an appeal for a continuance with renewed zeal and the Congregational church of East Weymouth starts on its 73rd year with a bright outlook.

Seventy-five Years Old.

Rev. Frank B. Cressey, of Cambridge, formerly pastor of the Weymouth Baptist church, was seventy-five years old on the 31st inst.; also, last Sabbath was the sixtieth anniversary of his baptism. The ordinance was administered by his father who organized the Hingham Baptist church in 1831; the place of baptism was at St. Paul, Minnesota, in the Mississippi river, the ice three feet thick, being cut for the purpose. Mr. Cressey was pastor in Weymouth over eleven years, the pastorate closing six years ago last August, since which time he has been living at 454 Broadway, Cambridge, near Harvard University. The birthday was generously remembered by Weymouth friends by the gift of cards, flowers and money. While pastor in Weymouth Mr. Cressey attended 155 funerals and since closing his pastorate he has been called back for similar service 48 times, a total of two hundred and three funeral services; had also officiated at not a few baptisms and weddings. He still retains his membership in both the Weymouth church and the Grand Army Post contributing regularly to the support of both; also, greatly appreciates the many kindnesses received from both Baptists and many other citizens of Weymouth.

Airing the Plants.

How many people air their plants? This must be done on all pleasant days by opening the windows at some distance from them, never the window at which they are growing, and so mixing the fresh, cold air with the warm air of the room. This is especially necessary in winter.

IN OUR TOWN.

Business has been rushing in the fire dept. the past week.

We hear about town that the shoe business is picking up a bit, the orders from the salesmen on the road averaging about ten per cent higher than anticipated.

Ye sport fans, don't fail to read "Doc" Fabyan's sport column. It is alive with news about all the doings in athletics in all parts of the town. It will be a weekly feature, read it every week and follow your favorite game in this section.

Don't forget the "Help-Now" campaign and help at once!

In another week the schools will close for the annual Spring vacation and the teachers and scholars alike will enjoy the rest after the past three months stretch. On April 5, the final term of the year will open, and then the last few months previous to the long summer vacation will be on with the graduations and other festivities connected with the last days of the school year.

The man who fell or jumped off of the train between the Braintree and East Braintree stations last Saturday night, as claimed, must have been an India rubber being, as most of us would at least be badly injured if not killed under such conditions.

Don't forget the Fairmount Cemetery fair next week, an attractive program has been provided.

With the coming of good weather the horsemen about town are getting restless and soon the speedsters will be out warming up for the racing when warm weather arrives in earnest.

There is certainly one consolation for the fire laddies during these busy days with grass fires, they have lots of nice rides on the new trucks.

We haven't heard much about "Clean-Up" week as yet this year! Get started early this year Clean-Up committee, and make the week more of a success even than it was on the initial attempt in 1914.

We need rain and lots of it! If the people of our communities won't stop being careless and let grass fires start and flourish, Mr. Weatherman will have to take charge of the situation.

"Go-To-Church Sunday" seems to have been lost in the shuffle this year. Last year it came on February 8, but why wait for a "Go-To-Church Sunday," go every Sunday and get the habit, then keep it.

Monday Club.

Reciprocity or Presidents Day was observed by the club March 15 at Odd Fellows Hall. Mrs. Edwin R. Sampson presided. Mrs. Chester Halloway reported a balance in the treasury of $268.11. The guest money of February 15, given the high school, for the cause of music, amounted to fifteen dollars. The sewing teacher says that only three ladies have responded to the appeal for supplies. Mention was made of Children's Day March 29, and Gentlemen's Night April 5. Music was furnished by an orchestra consisting of Miss Ethel F. Raymond piano, Miss Hazel Clarke violin, and Miss Mildred Ridley cello. Both Miss Clarke and Miss Ridley gave solos and responded freely to encores. The last piece played was the two-step composed by Frank Ventre of the High school.

Mrs. Sampson spoke a few words of welcome and then introduced Mrs. Arthur D. Ropes, president of the Wollaston Women's club and Mrs. William H. Buck, president of the Reading Women's club, who gave an outline of the work being done in their clubs. Both ladies are fluent speakers and the audience enjoyed hearing of the efforts of our sister clubs. Several club presidents and their secretaries were present.

At the close of the meeting a social was held with Mrs. John Taylor as hostess. Her assistants were: Mrs. W. H. Wilde, Mrs. G. A. Walker, Mrs. R. H. Whiting, and Mrs. W. T. Sabury. The pointers were: Mrs. Elizabeth B. Pratt, Mrs. A. E. Brals, Mrs. E. H. Kavanaugh and Mrs. Roy Vining.

Clark Christian Endeavor Union.

The quarterly meeting of the Clark Christian endeavor union was held in the Union church, South Weymouth, last Friday night with 255 delegates present from all over this section.

Pres. Ralph Spaulding of North Abington presided, and devotional exercises were conducted by C. J. Underhill of Weymouth and Rev. A. H. Bissel of Hingham.

The Banner for the largest percentage in attendance was awarded for the sixth consecutive time to the Congregational Church Society in East Weymouth.

Reports were read and an address given by Rev. D. A. McKay of Boston on "A Saloonless Nation in 1920."

Solos by Stephen F. Pratt and a social hour completed the program.

BOY SCOUT NOTES.

Troop 2, East Weymouth.

Clarence Wyman, George Chalmers and Emory Millett were recently elected members of the troop.

At a recent meeting George Russo qualified as a tenderfoot and the tenderfoot initiation was bestowed upon him.

The troop is to hold a sociable on March 26, with the following committee in charge: Patrol Leaders Lincoln and Blackney on entertainment and Scouts Hersey and Belcher on refreshments.

Assistant scout master Dizer has taken charge of a class of four scouts in signaling.

Beginning April 3, the scout master will conduct a series of Saturday afternoon hikes and trips in this section. If possible an over night hike will be taken once a month.

Troop 3, Lovell's Corner.

The meeting of Troop 3, Boy Scouts of Lovell's Corner, was held in the engine house Monday evening. Arrangements and plans were started for attending the field day to be held at the Fair grounds, April 19th. Signaling was taken up for the first and second class scouts. Saturday afternoon. The scouts plan to go on a hike with assistant Scout Master Thompson.

The Boy Scouts and other young people under the direction of Frank Blanchard are preparing for a minstrel show to be given towards a scout camp.

Troop 5, South Weymouth.

The Boy Scouts held their weekly meeting last Wednesday evening in the small hall of Fogg's opera house. Last Saturday the boys went on a ten mile hike about town. At Cranberry pond they were given instructions on how to use their mess kits.

Echoes of Town Meeting.

Fogg's Opera house made an idea for the big meeting.

There was a report around on the morning of Town meeting day that an attempt was to be made by the town to purchase the Fogg building, but nothing came up in the meeting and no one could be found who knew where the story originated.

The genial J. C. (Cad) Howe, who has passed to the Great Beyond since the annual March meeting of 1914, was much missed by the large gathering. "Cad" as he was familiarly known was always the life of the town meetings and even at the 1914 gathering, when he was in bad shape physically, he kept the crowd in good spirits all the time and was ready at all times to boom a worthy article, no matter what part of the town it concerned.

John A. Raymond, clerk of the meeting rounded out his 38th year in this capacity and we believe that this record is as good if not better than any other man's in the state.

After debating for nearly four hours on the Ward 3 school house question, it speaks well for the voters of the town for the quick way the other ninety-five articles were run off. At times it looked like several extra sessions, before the warrant would be completed.

Judge Louis A. Cook conducted the meeting in his usual efficient manner. The judge is, like Mr. Raymond, a pioneer in the town meeting line, having served as moderator for twenty-six years.

At the close of the meeting the moderator was designated to appoint an appropriation committee for next year and the committee of this year was extended a much merited vote of thanks, as we are told that the members spent many evenings going over the several articles and getting as fair a recommendation ready as was possible.

Miss Ethelyn Doble, of the Edwin Clapp Shoe Co. occupied a chair at the appropriation committee's desk where she assisted the committee in getting notes of the work, for use next year.

LOVELL'S CORNER

At the fourth quarterly conference of the Porter M. E. church with District Superintendent Dr. Cooper presiding, by a unanimous vote of the people, Rev. Karl Thompson was called back for other year which call he accepted.

A baked bean supper was held in the church vestry Wednesday evening.

Last Thursday evening a surprise party was given to Mrs. George Abbott at Pratt's hall. Games were enjoyed as well as music by an eight piece orchestra.

Miss Pauline Tirrell has accepted a position with the advertising department of the Stetson Shoe factory.

The Ladies' Aid society met at the home of Mrs. Annie Newcomb on Washington street, Wednesday afternoon, to sew.

SPORTS IN TOWN.

By J. E. Fabyan.

We have secured J. E. Fabyan, the popular East Weymouth physical director and trainer, to conduct our sporting department. Mr. Fabyan has had considerable newspaper experience and this department will be one of our weekly features. Sporting events may be sent to Mr. Fabyan by mail or phone 224-W or to this office and they will receive prompt attention.

The second athletic meet of the Tri-annual league series will be held in the Braintree High school tomorrow afternoon, March 20 at 2 o'clock.

In the bowling at the Norfolk club, South Weymouth, the present standing of the high men in each rating is as follows: Class A, Frank Loud, 104; Class B, Geo. Marshall, 99; Class C, Geo. Crawford, 94; Class D, Fred Clark, 90; Class E, Ernest Trussell, 87.

Last Friday night the boys of the Norfolk club were taken into camp by the Clapp Memorial five. The Weymouth Center quintet were strong on the finish and although they managed to land 2 out of 3 strings, it was no walk-over. Lou Loring was the star performer with a single of 129 and three string total of 856. After the bowling a fine lunch was served and every one agreed that it was a grand time. The score:

NORFOLK CLUB.

The Ladies Bowling club of the Clapp Memorial association bowled a return match with the ladies of the North Abington Y. M. C. A. Thursday night. They made the trip in a special car leaving Central square at 6:35.

It sometimes seems that there are some people in this world that never know when to say "Sufficient."

This was brought to my attention forcibly this week when I received a letter from the manager of Joe Biss, the wrestler, claiming that Archie Jeannette was Welter-weight champion only by name and that his man could defeat Jeannette easily, if all holds were allowed except the strangle hold.

Jeannette has defeated Biss twice and if I can make satisfactory arrangements I will bring these men together for the third time when all holds will be allowed except the strangle hold.

Many of the fans are calling for some amateur boxing and if I can arrange for suitable opponents for Z-coll and Webb, we will put these boys on in the near future.

WEYMOUTH HIGH BASE BALL.

The prospects for a fast team at Weymouth High were never any brighter. Between 35 and 40 men are in the squad and all seem determined to make good. Coach Cosgrove is beginning to wear a perplexed look which I imagine comes from trying to decide where to cut the squad. I believe that the team which is finally selected will be able to give any semi pro team in these parts a good go.

The race is getting hot in the candle pin tournament on the association alleys. The team standing at present is as follows: Team 1, won 20 points, lost 8; team 2, won 21 points, lost 11; team 3, won 20 points, lost 12; team 4, won 8 points, lost 24; team 5, won 3 points, lost 20; team 6, won 20 points, lost 8. Who can pick the winners?

QUESTION DEPARTMENT.

Any question pertaining to local athletics we will gladly answer, if possible.

SUNDAY NIGHT FORUM.

Good Crowd Out Last Sunday Night to Hear Prof. Jay W. Hudson of the University of Missouri.

A good crowd attended the Sunday Night Forum meeting in the Baptist church in Lincoln square, Weymouth, last Sunday evening. Rev. C. J. Underhill presided. Prof. J. W. Hudson of the University of Missouri gave an interesting address on the subject, "America's Message to Europe." Miss Bertha Barnes sang, "O, Divine Redeemer" and "Just For Today." Miss Emma L. Clapp presided at the organ.

FIRE DEPARTMENT KEPT BUSY.

Large Number of Grass Fires of Past Week Keeps Combinations 1, 2, 3 and 5 Hustling.

The fire departments about town have been kept continually on the jump the past week, with many grass fires and also some woods fires. The unofficial record is as follows:

WARD 5.

On Monday March 16, there were two still alarms for the firemen of Comb. 5. At 12:20 the men were called on a still alarm for a grass fire in the rear of the home of Burleigh French on Pleasant street which they promptly extinguished. An hour later they were called again on a still alarm for a brush fire on the estate of Alston Shaw.

On Mar. 12, Comb. 5 was called to box 54 about noon, for a woods fire back of the residence of Herman H. Weitzing.

On Mar. 13, a still alarm at 11:30 was answered by Comb. 5, for a grass fire in the rear of the barn on the Nevin estate on Columbian street. The shed on the rear of the barn had caught fire and but for the prompt action of the firemen a serious fire would have resulted.

Box 45, Sunday the 14th, was pulled for a woods fire back of the residence of Ray Locke. After an hour's work, the firemen were returning to the engine house when box 43 was blown, requiring the firemen to answer another woods fire on West street in the section known as the Acres. After three hours of hard work the firemen were once more enabled to return to their homes, for their belated dinners.

Box 62, Mar. 14 at 11 p. m. called Comb. 5 once more for another woods fire in the rear of the residence of Emory Staples on Main street in the section known as the Old City. The firemen were compelled to work two hours before gaining control. This made the third fire in one day and on the whole a rather strenuous one for the boys of Comb. 5.

WARD 2.

Still alarms for grass fires and several bell alarms, have kept the Ward 2 combination on the hustle the past week. The record follows:

March 12, box 19, grass near Weymouth Heights station.

March 13, at 1:45, box 25 grass, lot corner Laurel and Maple streets. At 5 o'clock still alarm, fire near Keith factory No. 8.

At 1:45 last Saturday afternoon an alarm was pulled in for a brisk fire burning in the grass on the lot at the corner of Laurel and Maple streets. When the firemen arrived the blaze was dangerously near the barn on the estate, but a good stream of chemical soon had the fire under control with little or no damage. It is said that the fire caught from someone carelessly throwing a cigarette butt into the dry grass before extinguishing the fire in the ashes. The Ward 2 truck, in charge of Lewis Blanchard made good time responding to the call.

WARD 3.

The local firemen were kept on the jump fighting forest fires Sunday. At one o'clock the auto combination responded to an alarm from box 45 and had just got back to the engine house when they were called to box 43. Later in the afternoon they responded to a still alarm for a fire in the woods on Broad street in the rear of the house of James J. Hennessy. The alarm Saturday afternoon from box 37 was for a chimney fire at the house, corner of Richmond street and Baker avenue owned by Miss Nora Spillaine. There was no damage and at 11 o'clock Sunday, night the auto responded to an alarm from box 62 South Weymouth. It was another forest fire. Monday afternoon they responded to alarms from boxes 224 and 26.

James Fitzgerald had a narrow escape from being burned to death at two o'clock yesterday morning when he awoke to find his home in flames. He screamed for help and finally succeeded in getting out doors. The blaze was discovered by neighbors who pulled in an alarm from box 35. The local department and auto from East Weymouth responded quickly. The sparks caught fire to several of the nearby building and were saved by the firemen. The building was situated off Summit street and had been occupied for some years as a dwelling by Mr. Fitzgerald. The building and contents were totally destroyed causing a loss to building and

MAD DOG IN SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

Bites Two Children and Express Agent.

Considerable excitement was caused in Independence square, South Weymouth, last Wednesday afternoon, when a mad dog was discovered running around loose. The animal bit the son of James Tirrell and also a youngster living with James Burke. Officer Ford was notified and soon picked up the trail of the dog. He trailed the beast nearly to the North Abington line, where he lost the trail in the woods. It was reported later that the same animal bit the Adams express agent in North Abington. F. W. Loud, inspector of animals in town, has quarantined a number of dogs which have come in contact with the victim of the rabies.

The State Board of Health calls the attention of the board that July 1st of this year is the time limit for providing a tuberculosis hospital or submit to the penalty for violation of the Act of 1911.

The Town Board of Health ask for a location on the town farm for the erection of a building or buildings to be used for cases which require isolation.

The appointment of F. Wilbur Load as inspector of animals was approved by the Board of Animal Inspection.

The George Washington Memorial association acknowledge the gift of $550 from the Town of Weymouth.

Members of the Planning board gathered in the Town Offices last Tuesday evening but on account of the lack of a quorum, no formal organization was effected. A general discussion of town affairs was held.

George M. Keene, Hurt.

On Wednesday forenoon George M. Keene, contractor and builder, got onto the wagon of Mr. Sternburg in Jackson square to go to his, (Keene's) house to look at some stock. The horse had just been fed and the feed bag had been removed, but the bit had not been replaced in the mouth of the animal, properly. The result was a runaway. Mr. Sternburg jumped from the wagon and escaped injury but Mr. Keene stuck by and in his efforts to stop the horse was thrown to the ground and received quite serious injury from the concussion, and two wheels passing over him.

He was taken to his home with a somewhat bruised face and injury to his side and leg but no bones broken and up to this morning is getting along finely.

JOHN A. RAYMOND, Town Clerk.
WEYMOUTH, MASS.
P. O. Address, East Weymouth, Mass. 52-2

Following Are a Few of the Items
Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

THIRTY SEVEN YEARS AGO.

Work on the site of the new Post Office building in East Weymouth was commenced Monday, piles being driven for the foundation.

Deacon Sprague planted two rows of peas last Friday. The prospect is that the Deacon will enjoy the rarity of eating home raised peas on the seventeenth of June.

The Active Engine Co. has had a new hose carriage built for them by Charles Chubbuck and Joseph Poland, which is being painted by Mr. Harrigan, of North Weymouth.

The Gen'l Putnam will arrive in about two weeks, and will undoubtedly be the finest looking machine in the State. Weymouth should be proud to place it in their fire department wherever it will be located.

The infant class of the M. E. Sabbath school has presented their teacher, Mrs. Joseph A. Cushing, with a handsome china set and an elegant silver castor. Mr. and Mrs. Cushing have recently gone to house-keeping.

No. 21, I. O. O. F., celebrated their third anniversary at their hall on Monday evening last. The entertainment consisted of singing by Miss Annie Dean, Miss Nellie Nolan, Mrs. S. B. Bagley and two ladies present favored the company with a whistling duet which was highly appreciated.

TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO.

Last Monday Josiah Bates, who was born and has always lived in East Weymouth, cast his first ballot at the town house, he being upwards of sixty years of age.

The venerable and highly esteemed Father Hewitt will occupy the pulpit at the Universalist church next Sunday at 10.30 a. m., a fact which should be sufficient to draw a large congregation.

A movement is on foot to raise $1000 by subscription, to be placed in the hands of an efficient committee, to enforce the liquor law in East Weymouth. Our gentleman has already volunteered to give $100 and more if necessary.

The regular meeting of the Executive Committee of the South Weymouth Improvement association was held at the engine hall last Friday evening, but for various reasons the attendance was not so large as usual. Vice president D. S. Murray occupied the chair and the principal business transacted was in the interest of street lighting. It was voted to erect lamps near the residences of Alvah Raymond, Jas. F. Fawley, Louis A. Cook, D. S. Murray and S. S. Spear, these parties having signified their willingness to care for the same.

The following are some of the towns in Norfolk county which gave a majority on license question.

	No.	Yes.
Braintree	155	80
Dorham	448	425
Hyde Park	584	243
Mesfield	87	38
Norwood	247	16

Sharon	53	6

Paint Now.

If you ought to have painted last year and waited, how much do you think you made?

You'll buy an extra gallon this year. There's 85 or 86 for paint and labor. You think you won't, but you will; you can't stretch paint.

It is always so; the longer you wait, the more paint and wages. Besides what paint is for. What is it for?

DEVOTE.

Wood in Flying Machine.

Flying machines are made almost entirely of wood. The propellers of the aeroplanes are in most instances made of selected ash, which, in addition to being strong and light, will not split under vibration or shock. Built up layers of spruce with mahogany centers are also in use. Spruce is used in the construction of the frame because of its markedly straight grain and freedom from hidden defects.—Washington Star.

Installment Plan.

Bill—Thought you said you were going to buy a cow?
Jill—Well, I'm doing it.
Bill—Where is it?
Jill—Over at my neighbor's. I'm buying it on the installment plan. I've bought a lot of the milk already.—Yonkers Statesman.

Investigating His Credit.

"Say, Brooks, can I borrow a little money from you until next pay day?"
"Why-er-yes, I suppose so. How much do you want?"
"None at all, dear boy. I only wanted to satisfy myself that my credit was good."—London Standard.

SERIOUS ERROR IN WEYMOUTH.

Weymouth Citizens Will Do Well to Profit by the Following.

Many fatal cases of kidney disease have reached an incurable stage because the patient did not understand the symptoms. Even today in Weymouth there are many residents making the same serious error. They attribute their mysterious aches and pains to overwork, or worry, or perhaps, when all the time their rheumatic pains, backache and bladder irregularities are most probably due to weak and ailing kidneys. If you are ill, if your kidneys are out of order, profit by this Weymouth resident's experience.

Asa K. Binney, 112 Broad St., Weymouth, says: "I can't say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. I have taken several boxes for lame back and other kidney disorders and I never fail to get relief. I am just as enthusiastic about Doan's Kidney Pills now as I was when I gave a statement praising them some years ago. Today I gladly confirm all I have ever said about this remedy."

Mr. Binney is only one of many Weymouth people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Binney had, the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. ## OUR FIRST ELECTION.

Method in the Days When Washington Was Chosen President.

At the first national election at which General Washington was chosen president only eleven of the thirteen states voted, North Carolina and Rhode Island not yet having entered the Union, and in only three—Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia—were popular elections held. In the other eight states the legislatures chose the electors. New York did not choose electors because of a feud between the anti-Federalist house and the Federalist senate.

One exciting incident was caused by the fear on the part of Alexander Hamilton that John Adams, who was on the ticket for vice president with Washington, was plotting to tie the vote, and thus by throwing the election into the national house of representatives defeat the Father of His Country for president. So real was this fear in Hamilton that he dispatched messengers on horses to Virginia, Connecticut and New Jersey to stampede the legislatures of the latter two states to Washington.

So long did it take to gather news that Washington was actually inaugurated president before some of the remote counties in Virginia had sent in their returns. In this first election there was only one ticket and there was no campaigning. There were only about 3,000,000 inhabitants in the country at that time, and the whole cost of setting up the machinery of this presidential election is estimated at less than $100,000.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Spinster's Hint.

A maiden well advanced in years used to wait every morning for the postman, a bachelor of about her age, and ask him if there were not a letter for her. Several weeks passed thus, but the anxiously expected letter did not arrive. Finally one morning the postman said to her:

"Well, tomorrow you shall get your letter if I have to write it myself."

"That's right; do it," replied the old maid. "I shall be delighted to accept it."

"Well," said the postman, smiling, "what do you want me to write—a business letter or a love letter?"

"If you mean business, please write a love letter," was her blushing reply. —London Scraps.

Ownership of the Air.

Our ancestors must have foreseen the aeroplane or they would not have embodied in the law the principle that he who owns the land owns the column of air above "usque ad coelum," or up to the skies. This can be traced back as far as the reign of Edward I. and from this time every authority to the present court of appeal has emphasized the right of every citizen not only to be king of his own castle, but of the sky above it.—London Chronicle.

Too Deep For Him.

A Britisher was announcing his views on things in general and summed up his own position by the statement, "Well, I've seen life." "But," said his American friend, "one of your own bright poets has said, 'Life's a joke.'" The Britisher is still exploring the remark.—New York Times.

Consistent.

She—This wait between the acts seems to me to be dreadfully long. He—Yes. You see, twenty years are supposed to elapse, and the management is simply trying to make the effect as realistic as possible.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Trimming the Barber.

The Head Barber—Sure, Mr. Allgall, I'll lend you a dollar. Glad to help you out. Mr. Allgall—Many thanks, old man. They're having a sale of safety razors around the corner, and I didn't want to miss it.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Every real and searching effort for self improvement is of itself a lesson of profound humility.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"I shall help you to run away." "LISTEN to me," said McCan. "The spring thaw is here, and the crust is coming on the snow. It's the time to travel. I would run with no less a man than you."

"But you can't run," Smoke contradicted. "Your backbone is as limber as thawed marrow. If I run, I run alone. The world fades, and perhaps I shall never run." "Your partner is dead. My hunters did not kill him. They found the body, frozen in the first of the spring storms in the mountains. No man can escape. When shall we celebrate your marriage?"

And Labiskwee: "I watch you. There is trouble in your eyes, in your face. Oh, I do know all your face. When you are happy the corners of your mouth turn up. When you think sad thoughts they turn down. When you smile there are three and four wrinkles at the corners of your eyes. When you laugh there are six. But I can not count them now."

"I have never read books. I do not know how to read. But Four Eyes taught me much. And in his own eyes I have seen the trouble of the hunger for the world. He was often hungry for the world. Is the world so good that you, too, are hungry for it? Four Eyes had nothing. But you have me." She sighed and shook her head. "Four Eyes died still hungry for the world. And if you lived here always would you, too, die hungry for the world? I am afraid I do not know the world. Do you want to run away to the world?"

Smoke could not speak, but by his mouth corner lines was she convinced. Minutes of silence passed in which she visibly struggled, while Smoke cursed himself for the unguessed weakness that enabled him to speak the truth about his hunger for the world while it kept his lips tight on the truth of the existence of the other woman.

Again Labiskwee sighed. "Very well. I love you more than I fear my father's anger, and he is more terrible in anger than a mountain storm. You told me what love is. This is the test of love. I shall help you to run away back to the world."

Smoke awakened softly and without movement. Warm, small fingers touched his cheek and slid gently to a pressure on his lips. The one word "Come" was breathed in his ear. He sat up carefully and listened. Close at hand he could distinguish the light regular breathing of Snass.

Labiskwee tugged gently at Smoke's sleeve and he knew she wished him to follow. He took his moccasins and German socks in his hand and crept out into the snow in his sleeping moccasins. Beyond the glow from the dying embers of the fire she indicated to him to put on his outer footgear, and while he obeyed she went back under the fly where Snass slept.

Feeling the hands of his watch. Smoke found it was 1 in the morning. Labiskwee rejoined him and led him on through the sleeping camp.

"Now we can talk," she said when the last fire had been left half a mile behind.

In the starlight, facing him, Smoke noted for the first time that her arms were burdened, and, on feeling, discovered she carried his snowshoes, a rifle, two belts of ammunition and his sleeping robes.

"I have everything fixed," she said, with a happy little laugh. "I have been two days making the cache. There is meat, even flour, matches and skis, which go best on the hard crust, and, when they break through, the webs will hold up longer. Oh, I do know snow travel, and we shall go fast, my lover."

Smoke checked his speech. That she had been arranging his escape was surprise enough, but that she had planned to go with him was more than he was prepared for. Unable to plan immediate action, he gently, one by one, took her burdens from her. He put his arms around her and pressed her close, and still he could not think what to do.

"God is good," she whispered. "He sent me a lover."

Yet Smoke was brave enough not to suggest his going alone. And ere he spoke he saw all his memory of the bright world reel and fade.

"We will go back, Labiskwee," he said. "You will be my wife, and we shall live always with the Caribou people."

"No, no." And her body, in the circle of his arm, resented his proposal. "I know. I have thought much. The hunger for the world would come upon you, and in the long nights it would devour your heart. Four Eyes died of hunger for the world; so would you die. And I will not have you die. We will go on across the snow mountains the Wheeler Syndicate.

"Dear, listen," he urged. "We must go back."

She pressed her mitten against his lips to prevent further speech. "You love me. Say that you love me." "I do love you, Labiskwee. You are my wonderful sweetheart."

Again the mitten was a caressing obstacle to utterance. "We shall go on to the cache," she said with decision. "It would be a great wrong to you to go back. I—I am only a wild girl, and I am afraid of the world, but I am more afraid for you. You see, it is as you told me. I love you more than anybody else in the world. I love you more than myself. The Indian language is not a good language. The English language is not a good language. The thoughts in my heart for you, as bright and as many as the stars—there is no language for them. How can I tell you them? They are there—see!"

As she spoke she slipped the mitten from his hand and thrust the hand inside the warmth of her parka until it rested against her breast. Tightly and steadily she pressed his hand in its position. And in the long silence he felt the beat, beat of her heart and knew that every beat of it was love. And then slowly, almost imperceptibly,

"We will go back, Labiskwee. You will be my wife."

still holding his hand, her body began to incline away from him and toward the direction of the cache. Nor would he resist. It was as if he were drawn by her heart itself as that so nearly lay in the hollow of his hand.

So firm was the crust that they slid along rapidly on their skis.

"Just here, in the trees, is the cache," Labiskwee told Smoke.

The next moment she caught his arm with a start of surprise. The flames of a small fire were dancing merrily, and crouched by the fire was McCan.

"I was minded you'd run without me," McCan explained, when they came up, his small peering eyes glimmering with cunning. "So I kept an eye on the girl, and when I seen her cackin' skis and grub I was on. I've brought my own skis and webs and grub. Will we be startin' now?"

Labiskwee looked swift consternation at Smoke, as swiftly achieved a judgment on the matter and spoke.

"McCan, you are a dog!" she hissed, and her eyes were savage with anger. "I know it is in your heart to raise the camp if we don't take you. Very well. We must take you. But you know my father. I am like my father. You will obey. And if you play one dirty trick it would be better for you if you had never run."

Daylight found them in the belt of foothills that lay between the rolling country and the mountains. McCan suggested breakfast, but they held on.

Labiskwee explained to Smoke her knowledge of the country and the way she planned to baffle pursuit. There were but two ways out, one west, the other south. Snass would immediately dispatch parties of young men to guard the two trails. But there was another way south. True, it did no more than penetrate halfway into the high mountains; then, twisting to the west and crossing three divides, it joined the regular trail. When the young men found no traces on the regular trail they would turn back in the belief that the escape had been made by the west traverse, never dreaming that the run always had ventured the harder and longer way around.

Glancing back at McCan, in the rear, Labiskwee spoke in an undertone to Smoke. "He is eating," she said. "It is not good."

Smoke looked. The man was secretly munching caribou snout from the pocketful he carried.

"No eating between meals," he commanded. "There's no game in the country ahead, and the grub will have to be whacked in equal rations from the start. The only way you can travel with us is by playing fair."

By 1 o'clock the crust had thawed so that the skis broke through, and before 2 o'clock the web shoes were breaking through. Camp was made and the first meal eaten. Smoke took stock of the food. McCan's supply was a disappointment. So many silver fox skins had he stuffed into the bottom of the meat bag that there was not the space left for meat.

Enough food for a month, with careful husbanding and appetites that never blunted their edge, was Smoke's and Labiskwee's judgment. Smoke apportioned the weight and bulk of the packs, yielding in the end to Labiskwee's insistence that she, too, should carry a pack.

Next day the stream shallowed out in a wide mountain valley, and they were already breaking through the crust on the flats when they gained the harder surface of the slope of the divide.

"Ten minutes later, and we wouldn't have got across the flats," Smoke said when they paused for breath on the bald crest of the summit. "We must be a thousand feet higher here."

But Labiskwee, without speaking, pointed down to an open flat among the trees. In the midst of it, scattered about, were five dark specks that scarcely moved.

"The young men," said Labiskwee.

"They are wallowing to their hips," Smoke said. "They will never gain the hard footing this day. We have hours the start of them. Come on, McCan. Buck up. We don't eat till we can't travel."

In the higher valley in which they now found themselves the crust did not break till 3 in the afternoon, at which time they managed to gain the shadow of a mountain where the crust was already freezing again.

Black darkness came on, after a long twilight, at 9 o'clock, when they made camp in a clump of dwarf spruce. McCan was helpless. The day's march had been exhausting, but in addition, despite his nine years' experience in the arctic, he had been eating snow and was in agony with his parched and burning mouth. He crouched by the fire and groaned while they made the camp.

In the night came wind and snow, and through the day of blizzard they fought their way blindly, missing the turn of the way that led up a small stream and crossed a divide to the west. For two more days they wandered, crossing other and wrong divides, and in those two days they dropped spring behind and climbed up into the abode of winter.

"The young men have lost our trail, and what's to stop us restin' a day?" McCan begged.

But no rest was accorded. Smoke and Labiskwee knew their danger. They were lost in the high mountains, and they had seen no game nor signs of game. Day after day they struggled on through an iron configuration of landscape that compelled them to labyrinthine canyons and valleys that led rarely to the west. The terrible toll and the cold ate up energy, yet they cut down the size of the ration they permitted themselves.

One night Smoke was awakened by a sound of struggling. Distinctly he heard a gasping and strangling from where McCan slept. Kicking the fire into flame, by its light he saw Labiskwee, her hands at the man's throat and forcing from his mouth a chunk of partly chewed meat. Even as Smoke saw this her hand went to her hip and flashed with the sheath knife in it.

"Labiskwee!" Smoke cried, and his voice was peremptory.

The hand hesitated.

"Don't," he said, coming to her side.

She was shaking with anger, but the hand, after hesitating a moment longer, descended reluctantly to the sheath.

McCan sat up, whimpering and snarling.

"Where did you get it?" Smoke demanded.

"Feel around his body," Labiskwee said.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Like Weary Ghosts in a Dead World.

McCan strove to struggle, but Smoke gripped him cruelly and searched him, drawing forth from under his armpit, where it had been thawed by the heat of his body, a strip of caribou meat. A quick exclamation from Labiskwee drew Smoke's attention. She had sprung to McCan's pack and was opening it. Instead of meat out poured moss, spruce needles, chips—all the light refuse that had taken the place of the meat and given the pack its due proportion minus its weight.

Again Labiskwee's hand went to her hip, and she drew at the culprit, only to

During the third week of March in the year 1867, Mr. Charles G. Easterbrook issued the first Weymouth Gazette, in blank sheet form. To-day, just forty-eight years later, as this issue, is Vol. 49, No. 1, a new management presents for your approval, its first publication of the old reliable Weymouth Gazette. While we have been connected with this newspaper for five years, this is our initial week in complete charge, and we respectfully ask for a continuance of the hearty co-operation extended to the former regime. Our policy will be to serve the public impartially in all matters and we earnestly hope our efforts will meet with public favor. Mr. Hawes, ex-editor of the Gazette will continue as our assistant for a while, and as of yore, is glad to greet his business and citizen life friends at all times.

The fire automobiles have demonstrated their superiority over horse drawn vehicles in the many grass fires of the past week. It is stated that several serious blazes have been checked in time by the quick response of the trucks besides reducing the cost of horses and the hardships of making the heavy animals gallop a mile or more drawing a hose carriage or ladder truck.

The sad news the first of the week of the death of Lincoln Beachey, the aviator, brings forth the thought that "terra firma" is the best and safest place to stay for a while yet. Mr. Beachey last appeared in Massachusetts at the Brockton fair last October and his feats electrified the gatherings every day, but at last, in San Francisco bay something went wrong and another sterling and daring young man was hurled to a terrible death.

The middle of March and neither snow or rain but dust, dust and dust to returneth. With the sun running higher, the frost and mud all gone, March winds sweeping here and there, the dust condition is getting almost unbearable and people are crying for oil or water. We do not know what the longevity of an oil or tarvia treatment is but if it can not be made to last as long as the dust season does let us have a spring and midsummer treatment.

During these times of unemployment, the Weymouth Council K. of C. is to be congratulated on having such an enterprising committee as the "Help-Now" relief quintet is composed of. These men have done a great deal to help the needy about town, and only lack of supplies has kept them from doing considerable more. Help Now by assisting the committee with contributions of clothing for all ages, and other supplies, which are much in need. Any one who contributes to this worthy cause may rest assured that the most needy cases will be looked after, if they have been reported to the committee. Joseph Fern is secretary of the committee and his phone is Wey. 327 W.

On account of a large number of grass fires the neighboring city of Quincy started an investigation last week and the fire department was called out on fewer occasions, as a result. Weymouth seems to be afflicted with the same trouble, after looking over the fire record of the past seven days. Nearly every department in town was called out Saturday and Sunday, and Ward 3 and Ward 2, hardly returned from one alarm, either bell or by phone, when another call came in. With everything as dry as in the past few weeks it behooves every citizen to take up the slogan "Safety First" and take extra precaution to prevent the grass and brush fires, which may result in a more serious conflagration than that of last May. If the people of the town can not take the necessary care, the police should follow the example of their fellow members of the Granite City department.

While the chilly March winds still prevail and people are not as yet seeking much in the way of open air recreation we are daily reminded that the season for open cars and pleasure riding is fast approaching and nothing as yet has been done by the Street R. R. Co., the officials of Weymouth, the Board of Trade, the Planning Board or any one else to make better the almost unbearable condition of things in Jackson square. Here is the center of considerable travel, at times congested conditions of street car service, the transfer and exchange center of four or five different lines and not a waiting room, retiring room or sanitary service of any name or nature.

Imagine for a moment several hundred people, among them a large percent of

Old Colony Ladies' Club.

The next meeting of the Old Colony Ladies' club, which occurs next Thursday afternoon, in the Universalist church, South Weymouth, will have as an attraction, a musicale in charge of Dr. Porter Pratt, assisted by Carl Webster, cello and James Whyte, baritone. It will be an open meeting.

High School Notes.

A small crescent of gold, with the inscription W. H. S. '16 on an inner crescent of deep blue enamel, that is the new class pin of the Junior class. The Juniors are proud of them.

A meeting of the Senior class was held on Thursday of this week and it was voted to have a class play at graduation, according to custom. It was also voted to take some definite action in regard to class photographs. A graduation dance committee was elected.

The honor list for this term contains the following names: seniors, Kenneth Martin; Juniors, Dorothy Hagan, Arthur White and Ruth Ford; sophomores, Velma Abbott and Napoleon Bergeron; freshmen, Evelyn Bergeron, Alice Fulton.

The picture of the relay team was taken last week. "Look natural!" said the photographer. The team did—and spoiled the picture!

The baseball posters which have been printed to advertise the home games are a work of art. On them are the pictures of three pitchers, each distinguished from the other by a glove and a neat white suit.

Repertee at the Card Club.

At a card club the other day a woman tried to add the score, failed, and passed it to another woman, who likewise failed. The third added it without trouble. "Pardon me," said No. 1, sweetly, "but would you mind telling me whether you were a bookkeeper or a teacher before you were married?" "Neither," was the reply. "I was merely educated." — Kansas City Times.

HUBBARD GLACIER

Alaska's Gigantic Frozen River
as it Meets the Sea.

THE MOTHER OF ICEBERGS.

Rumblings and Roarings That Come as the Masses of Ice Break Away From the Face of the Lofty Cliff to Start on Their Ocean Voyages.

The birth of an iceberg is strikingly described in a report made to the National Geographic society by R. S. Tarr and Lawrence Martin, who headed the expeditions of the society to Alaska for the study of the behavior of glaciers there.

"The front of the Hubbard glacier, measured in a straight line, is three and one-half to four miles wide. But since the ice cliff has a sinuous form with projections in the center it is in reality much longer than this, the total length being between four and one-half and five miles. This cliff rises between 250 and 300 feet above the water and extends an unknown distance below it.

"One usually needs to wait but a few moments to hear from some part of the cliff the thunder-like rumble or roar which is the first announcement of an iceberg's fall, followed a few moments later by the appearance of a great swell, which on reaching the shore forms a line of white breakers even at a distance of several miles from the ice cliff.

"By watching the ice cliff one may see the huge masses fall from the ice front and a fountain of water dash perhaps even to the top of the glacier and then in a few seconds hear the report which the rending of the glacier sends out.

"One is fascinated by the performance. Sometimes it is only a small piece that falls, and then a sharp single report like the crack of a pistol goes through the air; again a part of the front crumbles and the down-sliding ice, broken into small pieces, seems from a distance like a fountain of water, while the report is only a low rumble; at other times huge masses break away, forming large icebergs, and the noise then produced is like the heavy rumble of distant thunder, and at rare intervals one may see a huge mass of blue or black ice thrust itself up from below the flood, some distance from the glacier front, as a part of the submerged ice foot is broken off, and then no report is heard, but the wave that follows is far greater than usual.

"The water waves which follow the discharge of icebergs from the front of Hubbard glacier are of great magnitude. In September, 1913, for example, the big steamship Princess Maquihna was aground on a reef just west of Oster island with the members of the international geological congress, who visited Yakutat bay under the guidance of the junior author. The ship lay somewhat over a mile from the glacier, and yet the water wave following the discharge of icebergs from Hubbard glacier caused the steamer to roll until she took in water on the main deck as first one side and then the other was tipped far down by the iceberg waves.

"There are periods when for an hour or two there is very little discharge and then periods, fully as long, when scarcely a moment elapses without the sound of icefalls from some part of the glacier front. It is possible that these differences are in some way related to the state of the tide, but we have not determined whether the periods of quiet and activity form part of a regular cycle or are merely irregular intervals due to accumulation of strain and relief from strain or to expansion and contraction under sunlight.

"While there are periods of relative quiet, they are not periods of absolute repose, and they occupy far less time than the periods of activity. Day and night the ice falls, and the reports that pass out through the air are so frequent that it is fair to speak of the glacier as almost ceaselessly active. The noise disturbs one's sleep at first, and sometimes, when an unusually heavy fall occurs, wakens one even after he has grown accustomed to the ordinary rumble. A sense of nervous relief is felt when camp is removed to a part of the flood to which the iceberg roar and the breakers on the coast do not reach."

True Devotion.

Little Katharine had a big dog which she loved dearly. One cold night she asked if the dog could come into the house for awhile. Her mother said: "Yes, but as soon as he begins to scratch you must put him right out."

Later Katharine was heard to exclaim: "Oh, Bertie, don't scratch; tell me where it itches, and I'll scratch it for you."—Chicago Tribune.

A Possible Reason.

"Bermuda raises onions and lilies." "Seems a queer arrangement. I wonder why they picked out that particular combination?"

"Maybe the smell of the one offsets that of the other."—Louisville Courier Journal.

His Application.

Mother—My son, you should never defer until tomorrow what you can do today. Son—Then, mother, we'd better eat the rest of that mince pie to-night, hadn't we?—Judge.

Good is positive. All evil is so much death or nonentity.—Emerson.

Married on St. Patrick's Day

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

There is no calling that would seem to cause so much suffering from sympathy as a person employed in a manufactory or on a railroad to break the news to an operative's family that he has been killed. Where there are a large number of employees there is usually such a person, for there is a certain percentage of workmen killed every year.

Kathleen O'Rourke and Patrick Cogan met at a ball on the evening of St. Patrick's day, and Pat had asked her to dance with him many times. Afterward he invited her to go to a moving picture show with him. From that time forward they were together when not at work, and it was evident they were about to make a match.

But Pat had a mother to support, and Kathleen, who was an orphan, was a mother to a little brother and a sister. So they couldn't marry until they had laid up something. They both worked in the same factory, and each lived in a house built on the premises by the company to be used for homes for its employees. So they saw a great deal of each other.

They agreed that when their wedding occurred it should take place on the anniversary of their meeting, which was the evening before St. Patrick's day. When this first anniversary came around Pat had saved $400, and Kathleen had saved $300, and they decided that if they did as well the next year they would be married the evening before St. Patrick's day.

On the first of the year they counted up their savings and interest and concluded that with their nest egg they might be married and have enough for themselves and those dependent upon them. Kathleen bought what clothes she would need to last a year after her marriage, and in due time the banns were published in church. Finding it inconvenient to be married on the very day they had planned, March 16, they set their wedding day for the 15th.

This was partly because Pat was one of the committee of arrangements for the St. Patrick's day parade and was to lead his society on that occasion. When the hour came for the wedding Pat did not appear. Kathleen, dressed in her bridal apparel, waited for him with a wildly beating heart lest something had happened to him. She went to the door a dozen times to look for him and finally stationed herself at a window where she could look up the street on which the workmen's cottages were built.

Presently she saw Owen MacTavish coming. MacTavish was known to every one connected with the plant as the company's bad news breaker, and many a woman's heart beat quick when she saw him approaching her house. Kathleen no sooner saw him coming than she fancied he would stop at her home to tell her that Pat had been killed. Before he reached the door she had fallen in a swoon.

Now, MacTavish did not stop at the O'Rourke cottage and was unconscious that he had frightened a girl there into a swoon. Kathleen was picked up by her friends, who had gathered to attend her to the church for the wedding. When she came to herself she looked about, dreading to see the bad news breaker, but he was not there. "Is he gone?" she asked.

"Who gone?"
"MacTavish."
"He hasn't been here."
"And Pat isn't dead?"
"Nobody's heard of his being dead."
"Thanks be to God."

But Pat did not appear, and no one seemed to have any news of him. Word was sent to the company's office to inquire for him, but no information was elicited.

Kathleen for awhile gave herself up to grief. She was uncertain whether Pat had met with foul play or whether he had deserted her. It would have been easier for the poor girl if she had known which of the two suppositions was correct, for it would have relieved her somewhat of suspense.

When St. Patrick's day in the morning came round Kathleen made up her mind that her lover had deserted her and with true Irish grit declared that there were as good fish in the sea as ever were caught. Then the children asked her to take them to see the parade, and she consented—not that she wished to do so, but that she did not care to disappoint them.

They were all standing on a stoop where they could see the parade over the heads of others, and the societies were moving past when who should appear marching at the head of one of them but Pat. He saw Kathleen, but she gave him a withering look and turned her back to him. Relinquishing the command to another, he left the ranks and joined her.

This was Pat's explanation of his conduct: An accident had occurred at a mine owned by the company some miles away, and a rescue party was leaving on a train. Pat was ordered aboard and, instead of being married, was engaged in digging out buried miners. He returned on the morning of St. Patrick's day only in time to take his place in the parade.

It required some time to placate the maiden, for she thought Pat might have at least sent her word as to what had happened, but the fact that he had been the means of saving the lives of a number of miners finally induced her to forgive him and go with him that afternoon to the church.

ERRORS OF SCULPTORS.

Statues in England Noted For Crude Blunders in Modeling.

Some of the statues in public places in England are notable for certain unique symbols or glaring errors in modeling. One of the former kind is the statue of Sir Anthony Ashley at Wimborne, Dorset. Carved out of a stone at the feet of the figure is a faithful representation of a cabbage. Indicating that Sir Anthony introduced the vegetable from Holland into England.

Even more peculiar is the carving on one of the four panels on the Queen Victoria statue in George square, Glasgow. The subject is the knighting of James Anderson, the lord provost of that city. As no sword was available the ceremony was performed with an umbrella, and the substitute has been copied by the sculptor. This same statue is incorrect in one important detail. The stately pose of the horse is negated by the position of the hind legs—a position which is only possible when a horse is rearing at full speed.

Perhaps the worst equestrian statue in the world is that erected in front of Trinity college, Dublin, to the memory of King William III. Among other faults, one of the forelegs of the horse is straight and the other curved considerably. Yet both hoofs meet side by side on the pedestal—London Spare Moments.

Our Longest Canal.

The longest canal in the United States is the Erie canal, which covers a distance of 365 miles. The Florida East Coast canal is 350 miles long and runs from Mayport, Fla., to Miami. The Miami and Erie canal, between Cincinnati and Toledo, O., is 274 miles long. There are three canals in Pennsylvania, the Schuylkill Navigation company, between Mill Creek and Philadelphia, 108 miles; the Pennsylvania, between Columbia, Northumberland and Wilkesbarre, 133 miles, and the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, between Conport and Easton, 108 miles long. The longest canal in Europe is the Berlin-Stettin, 120, and the next longest, the Suez, 103 miles.—Philadelphia Press

Beauty of Zambesi Falls.

To realize fully the wondrous beauty of the Zambesi falls, Rhodesia, one must have time to linger and watch the ever changing scene. The depths of the chasm below are veiled from sight by the rising columns of opulent mist, and above the yawning abyss the sun glints and sparkles, weaving the drops into a magnificent rainbow. Three hundred feet below roars and boils the swirling flood as it emerges from the Boiling Pot, rushing on down the zigzag gorge between towering cliffs of rock, narrow, fierce and of unfathomable depth.—African World.

She Was Frank.

The moving picture director was having trouble in getting one of the scenes right. The girl was supposed to resist an attempt to kiss her, but the rehearsal was far from satisfactory. "Think, now," said the director, coaching her, "haven't you ever tried to stop a young man from kissing you?"

"No," was the girl's frank reply.—London Answers

"Yes?" rejoined Mrs. Cumrox. "I understand that the fare was really quite low. But, gracious me, the boat must have been terribly overcrowded."

She Flew at the Culprit, Only to Be Caught in Smoke's Arms.

be caught in Smoke's arms, where she surrendered herself, sobbing with the fullness of her rage.

"Oh, lover, it is not the fool!" she panted. "It is you, your life. The dog! He is eating you, he is eating you!"

It was a morning stark still, clear blue above, with white sun dazle on the snow. The way led up a long wide slope of crust. They moved like weary ghosts in a dead world.

"Something is going to happen," Labiskwee whispered. "Don't you feel it—here, there, everywhere? Every thing is strange."

"I feel a chill that is not of cold," Smoke answered. "Nor is it of hunger."

"It is in your head, your heart," she agreed excitedly. "That is the way I feel it."

A quarter of an hour later they paused for breath.

"The air is getting thick and heavy," said Labiskwee. "It is hard to breathe."

"There be three suns," McCan muttered hoarsely, feeling as he clung to his staff for support.

They saw a mock sun on either side of the real sun.

"There are five," said Labiskwee, and as they looked new suns formed and faded before their eyes.

"By heaven, the sky is filled with suns beyond all counting," McCan cried in fear.

Which was true, for, look where they would, half the circle of the sky dazzled and blazed with new suns forming.

McCan yelped sharply with surprise and pain. "I'm stung!" he cried out then yelped again.

Then Labiskwee cried out, and Smoke felt a pricking stab on his cheek so cold that it burned like acid.

And then a shot rang out, strangely muffled. Down the slope were the young men, standing on their skis, and one after another they opened fire.

"Spread out!" Smoke commanded. "And climb for it! We're almost to the top. They're a quarter of a mile below, and that means a couple of miles the start of them on the down going on the other side."

"Thank the Lord!" Smoke panted to Labiskwee, "all these suns spoil their aim."

"It shows my father's temper," she said. "They have orders to kill."

"How strange you talk!" Smoke said. "Your voice sounds far away."

"Cover your mouth!" Labiskwee cried suddenly. "And don't talk! I know what it is. Cover your mouth with your sleeve, thus, and do not talk."

From the crest, looking back, they saw the young men stumbling and falling on the upward climb.

"They will never get here," Labiskwee said. "It is the white death. I know it, though I have never seen it. I have heard the old men talk. Soon will come a mist unlike any mist or fog or frost smoke you ever saw. Few have seen it and lived."

McCan gasped and struggled. "Keep your mouth covered," Smoke commanded. McCan had sunk down, squatting on his skis, his mouth and eyes covered by his arms.

"Come on, make a start," Smoke ordered.

"I can't move," McCan moaned. "Let him be," Labiskwee muttered harshly.

But Smoke persisted, dragging the man to his feet and facing him down the long slope they must go. Then he started him with a shove, and McCan braked and steering with his staff shot into the sheen of diamond dust and disappeared.

Smoke looked at Labiskwee, who smiled, though it was all she could do to keep from sinking down. He nodded for her to push off, but she came near to him, and, side by side, a dozen feet apart, they flew down through the stinging thickness of cold fire.

Brake as he would, Smoke's heavier body carried him past her, and he dashed on alone, a long way, at tremendous speed, that did not slacken till he came out on a level, crusted plateau. Here he braked till Labiskwee overtook him, and they went on, again side by side, with diminishing speed, which finally ceased. The lethargy had grown more pronounced. The wildest effort of will could move them no more than a snail's pace. They passed McCan, again crouched down on his skis, and Smoke roused him with his staff in passing.

"Now we must stop," Labiskwee whispered painfully. "or we will die. We must cover up—so the old men said."

She did not delay to untie knots, but began cutting her pack lashings. Smoke cut his, and, with a last look at the fiery death mist and the mock cry of suns, they covered themselves over with the sleeping furs and crouched in each other's arms. They felt a body stumble over them and fall, then heard feeble whimpering drowned in a violent coughing fit and knew it was McCan who huddled against them as he wrapped his robe about him.

Their own lung strangling began, and they were racked and torn by a dry cough, spasmodic and uncontrollable. Smoke noted his temperature rising in a fever, and Labiskwee suffered similarly. Hour after hour the coughing spells increased in frequency and violence, and not till late afternoon was the worst reached. After that the mend came slowly, and between spells they dozed in exhaustion.

Smoke awoke with lips touching his lips. He lay partly in Labiskwee's arms, his head pillowed on her breast. Her voice was cheerful and usual. The muffled sound of it had vanished.

"It is day," she said, lifting the edge of the robes a trifle. "See, oh, my lover, it is day! We have lived through and we no longer cough. Let us look at the world, though I could stay here thus forever and always."

"I do not hear McCan," Smoke said. "And what has become of the young men that they have not found us?"

He threw back the robes and saw a normal and solitary sun in the sky. A gentle breeze was blowing, crisp with frost and hinting of warmer days to come. All the world was natural again. McCan lay on his back, his unwashed face, swarthy from camp smoke, frozen hard as marble. The sight did not affect Labiskwee.

"Look!" she cried. "A snowbird! It is a good sign."

There was no evidence of the young men. Either they had died on the other side of the divide or had turned back.

There was so little food that they dared not eat a tithe of what they needed, and in the days that followed, wandering through the lone mountain land, the sharp sting of life grew blunted, and the wandering merged half into a dream. Smoke would become abruptly conscious to find himself staring at the never ending hated snow peaks, his senseless babble still ringing in his ears. And the next he would know, after seeming centuries, was that again he was roused to the sound of his own manderings. Labiskwee, too, was light headed most of the time.

Came a day when it turned cold and a thick snow, that was not snow, but frost crystals of the size of grains of sand, began to fall. For three days and nights it continued to fall. It was impossible to travel until it crusted under the spring sun, so they lay in their furs and rested and ate less because they rested. So small was the ration they permitted that it gave no appeasement to the hunger pang that was much of the stomach, but more of the brain. And Labiskwee, delirious, maddened by the taste of her tiny portion, sobbing and mumbling, fell upon the next day's portion and crammed it into her mouth.

Then it was given to Smoke to see a wonderful thing. The food between her teeth roused her to consciousness. She spat it out and with a great anger struck herself with her clenched fist on the offending mouth.

It was given to Smoke to see many wonderful things in the days yet to come. After the long snowfall came on a great wind that drove the dry and tiny frost particles as sand is driven in a sandstorm. All through the night the sand frost drove by, and in the full light of a clear and wind blown day Smoke looked with swarming eyes and reeling brain upon what he took to be the vision of a dream. All about towered great peaks, and from the tip of every peak, swaying, undulating, flaring out broadly against the azure sky, streamed gigantic snow banners, miles in length, milky and nebulous, ever waving lights and shadows and flashing silver from the sun.

Labiskwee sat up among the furs. "I dream, Labiskwee," he said. "Look! Do you, too, dream within my dream?"

"It is no dream," she replied. "This have the old men told me. And after this will blow the warm winds, and we shall live and win west."

Smoke shot a snowbird, and they divided it. Once, in a valley where willows budded standing in the snow, he shot a snowshoe rabbit. Another time he got a lean white weasel.

"It is summer in the lower valleys," said Labiskwee. "Soon will it be summer here."

The days lengthened, and the snow began to sink. Each day the crust thawed, each night it froze again, and they were afoot early and late, being compelled to camp and rest during the midday hours of thaw when the crust could not bear their weight. When Smoke grew snow blind Labiskwee towed him on a thong tied to her waist. And when she was so blinded she was towed by a thong to his waist. And, starving, in a deeper dream, they struggled on through an awakening land bare of any life save their own.

The time came when the last food was gone. The high peaks receded, the divides became lower, and the way opened promisingly to the west. But their reserves of strength were gone, and, without food, the time quickly followed when they lay down at night and in the morning did not arise. Smoke weakly gained his feet, collapsed and on hands and knees crawled about the building of a fire. But, try as she would, Labiskwee sank back each time in an extremity of weakness. And Smoke sank down beside her, a wan sneer on his face for the automatism that had made him struggle for an unneeded fire. There was nothing to cook, and the day was warm.

CHAPTER XXV. Wonder of Women.

LABISKWEE lay in a stupor, her breathing so imperceptible that often Smoke thought her dead. In the afternoon the chattering of a squirrel aroused him. Dragging the heavy rifle, he wallowed through the crust that had become slush. He crept on hands and knees or stood upright and fell forward in the direction of the squirrel that chattered its wrath and fled slowly and tantalizingly before him. He had not the strength for a quick shot, and the squirrel was never still.

So profound was his weakness that he lay like dead through the night, nor did dreams disturb him.

The sun was in the sky the same squirrel chattering through the trees, when Labiskwee's hand on Smoke's cheek awakened him.

"Put your hand on my heart, lover," she said, her voice clear, but faint and very far away. "My heart is my love, and you hold it in your hand." A long time seemed to go by ere she spoke again. "Remember always there is no way south. That is well known to the caribou people. West—that is the way—and you are almost there and you will make it."

And Smoke drowsed in the numbness that is near to death until once more she aroused him.

"Put your lips on mine," she said. "I will die so."

"We will die together, sweetheart," was his answer.

"No." A feeble flutter of her hand checked him and so thin was her voice that scarcely did he hear it, yet did he hear all of it. Her hand fumbled and groped in the hood of her parka, and she drew forth a pouch that she placed in his hand. "And now your lips, my lover. Your lips on my lips and your hand on my heart."

And in that long kiss darkness came upon him again, and when again he was conscious he knew that he was to die. He was wearily glad that he was to die.

He found his hand resting on the pouch. With an inward smile at the idea with fresh fuel and that a steamed coffee pot steamed on the fire of the coals. Beside the fire, on a length, sat Shorty, smoking a brown paper cigarette and intent on watching him. Smoke's lips moved, a throat paralysis seemed to come on him, while his chest was suffused with the memory of tears. He reached out his hand for the cigarette and drew the smoke deep into his lungs again and again.

"I have not smoked for a long time," he said at last in a low, calm voice. "For a very long time."

"Nor eaten, from your looks," Shorty added, gruffly.

Smoke nodded and waved his hand at the paragon feathers that lay all about. "Not until recently," he returned. "Do you know, I'd like a cup of coffee; also duckpicks and a strip of bacon."

The one cooked and the other ate they told briefly what had happened to them in the days since their separation.

"The Klondike was breakin' up," Shorty concluded his recital, "and we just had to wait for open water. Two polli' bonts, six other men—you know 'em all, an' crackerjacks—an' all kinds of outfit. An' we're sure be a comin'—polli' linin' up, an' portagin'."

But the falls 'll stick 'em a solid week. That's where I left 'em, a cuttin' a trail over the tops of the bluffs for the boats. I just had a sure natural hunch to keep a comin'. So I fills a pack with grub an' starts. I knew I'd find you a-driffin' an' all in."

Smoke nodded. "Well, let's get started," he said.

"But you're feeble as a kid baby. You can't hike. What's the rush?"

"Shorty, I am going after the biggest thing in the Klondike, and I can't wait that's all. Start packing. It's the biggest thing in the world. It's bigger than lakes of gold and mountains of gold, bigger than adventure and meat eating and bear killing."

Shorty sat with bulging eyes. "In the name of the Lord, what is it?" he queried huskily. "Or are you just simply loco?"

"No, I'm all right. Perhaps a fellow has to stop eating in order to see things. At any rate, I have seen things I never dreamed were in the world. I know what a woman is—now."

Shorty's mouth opened, and about the lips and in the light of the eyes was the whimsical advertisement of the sneer forthcoming.

"Don't, please," Smoke said gently. "You don't know. I do."

Shorty gulped and changed his thought. "Hub! I don't need no hunch to guess her name. The rest of 'em has gone up to the drainin' of Sur prise lake, but Jay Gastell allowed she wouldn't go. She's stickin' around Dawson waitin' to see if I come back with you. An' she sure swears if I don't she'll sell her holdin's an' hire an army of gun fighters an' go into the curiosity that made him pull the drawstring, he opened it. Out poured a tiny flood of food. There was no particle of it that he did not recognize, all stolen by Labiskwee from Labiskwee—bread fragments saved far back; strips and strings of caribou meat, partly gnawed; crumbles of suet; a hind leg of the snowshoe rabbit, untouched; a hind leg and part of a fore leg of the white weasel; a wing, dented still by her reluctant teeth, and a leg of the snowbird pitiful remnants, tragic renotations, crucifixions of life, morsels stolen from her terrible hunger by her incredible love.

With maniacal laughter Smoke flung it all out on the hardening snow crust and went back into the blackness.

He dreamed. The Yukon ran dry in its bed, among muddy pools of water and ice scoured rocks, he wandered, picking up fat nugget gold. The weight of it grew to be a burden to him till he discovered that it was good to eat. And greedily he ate. After all, of what worth was gold that men should prize it so, save that it was good to eat?

He awoke to another sun. His brain was strangely clear. No longer did his eyesight blur. The familiar palpitation that had vexed him through all his frame was gone. The juices of his body seemed to sing as if the spring had entered it. Blessed well being had come to him. He turned to awaken Labiskwee and saw and remembered. He looked for the food thing out on the snow. It was gone. And he knew that in delirium and dream it had been the Yukon nugget gold. In delirium and dream he had taken heart of life from the life sacrifice of Labiskwee, who had put her heart in his hand and opened his eyes to woman and wonder.

He was surprised at the ease of his movements, astounded that he was able to drag her fur wrapped body to the exposed thawed gravel bank, which he undermined and caved upon her.

Three days, with no further food, he fought west. In the mid third day he fell beneath a lone spruce beside a wide stream that ran open and that he knew must be the Klondike. Ere blackness conquered him he unlashed his pack, said goodbye to the bright world and rolled himself in the robes.

Chirping, sleepy noises awoke him. The long twilight was on. Above him among the spruce bows were ptarmigan. Hunger bit him into instant action, though the action was infinitely slow. Five minutes passed before he was able to get his rifle to his shoulder, and a second five minutes passed ere he dared, lying on his back and aiming straight upward, to pull the trigger. It was a clean miss. No bird fell, but no bird flew. They rustled and rustled stupidly and drowsily. His shoulder pained him. A second shot was spoiled by the involuntary wince he made as he pulled the trigger.

The ptarmigan had not flown. He doubled and redoubled the robe that had covered him and humped it in the hollow between his right arm and his side. Resting the butt of the rifle on the far, he fired again, and a bird fell. He clutched it greedily and found that he had shot most of the meat from it. The large caliber bullet had left little else than a mass of mangled feathers.

Still the ptarmigan did not fly, and he decided that it was heads or nothing. He fired only at heads. He reloaded and reloaded the magazine. He missed; he hit, and the stupid ptarmigan, that were loath to fly, fell upon him in a rain of food—lives disrupted that his life might feed and live.

The first he ate raw. Then he rested and slept, while his life assimilated the life of it. In the darkness he awoke, hungry, with strength to build a fire. And until early dawn he cooked and ate, crunching the bones to powder between his long idle teeth. He slept, awoke in the darkness of another night and slept again to another sun.

He noted with surprise that the fire, kindled with fresh fuel and that a steamed coffee pot steamed on the fire of the coals. Beside the fire, on a length, sat Shorty, smoking a brown paper cigarette and intent on watching him. Smoke's lips moved, a throat paralysis seemed to come on him, while his chest was suffused with the memory of tears. He reached out his hand for the cigarette and drew the smoke deep into his lungs again and again.

"I have not smoked for a long time," he said at last in a low, calm voice. "For a very long time."

NAVAL TORPEDOES.

Intricate Mechanism of These Awful Engines of Destruction.

At the torpedo's head is an explosive chamber which holds damp gun cotton. This is fired by means of a rod which, on contact with the walls of a ship, is driven in upon a detonator. This fires a primer, which in turn explodes the gun cotton.

The next chamber stores compressed air to the pressure of 2,000 pounds to the square inch. This is practically the boiler room of the torpedo, for it supplies the motive power to the four cylinder engine which drives it through the water on its errand of destruction.

Next comes the wonderful gyroscope control of the air motor by which the rudders are adjusted. This is where the intricate mechanism of the torpedo is so clearly demonstrated. Should it rise or dip in the water this gyroscope actuates a motor which in turn operates rods related with the rudders and at once readjusts any deflection from the course originally set.

The motor mentioned is but a few inches in length, yet the power it exerts by means of compressed air is such that the pressure of half an ounce operated by the steering gear produces a pull of 100 pounds on the rudders.

This terrible fish's tail holds wheel gearing for the driving of two propellers and the manipulation of the rudders. The propellers revolve in opposite directions, thereby preventing the torpedo describing a circle.—London Answers.

Women and the Old Olympic Games.

One rule of the original Olympic games could not be followed nowadays without provoking serious troubles. Women were not allowed to be present or even to be anywhere in the district when the games were being celebrated on pain of being hurled from a precipitous rock. This rule is believed to have been defied only once, when the offender was pardoned in consideration of the fact that her father, brothers and son had been victors in the games. One particular priestess, however, was not only exempt from this law, but was accommodated with a special front seat on an altar of white marble, and women were allowed to enter chariots for the races, though they might not be present to see them win.

STRATEGY IN WAR

Retreats to Lure the Enemy From His Base of Supplies.

KNOWN AS FABIAN TACTICS.

Methods That Have Been Used by Warriors Since Long Before the Christian Era—George Washington Was Called the American Fabius.

After the great war in Europe had broken loose in the summer of 1914 and the allies fell back from their first line in northern France to the Marne a good deal was said and written of "Fabian tactics," and when the Germans fell back from the line of the Marne to the Aisne more was said of "Fabian tactics." In this country when Washington and the heroic Continental army fell back before the English in superior force and of superior equipment and perhaps superior discipline, his tactics were called "Fabian." In fact General George Washington was called and by historical writers is still referred to as "the American Fabius."

It is probably true that many Americans long parted from their school books have forgotten about Fabius, even though whenever an army makes an orderly retreat for the purpose of gaining time or reaching a more favorable position they speak fluently of "Fabian tactics." It is a phrase that comes trippingly off the tongue.

Fabius, as might easily be guessed from his name, was a Roman. He commanded the legions of Rome against the powers of Carthage 200 years before the Christian era. The tactics which came to be called after Fabius were no doubt employed centuries before Rome was born. Fabian tactics without doubt have been used ever since bodies of men made war, but it may be that Fabius so refined or systematized those tactics that it is just and worthy they bear his name.

Fabius in 217 B. C. stood opposite to the hosts or hordes of Carthaginians under the brilliant leadership of Hannibal. In battle before Fabius Maximus was called to the supreme command of the Roman troops in the field the Carthaginians had been victorious. Fabius, profiting by what had befallen his predecessors in command, avoided a pitched battle in the open and retreated, fighting as he fell back, holding off the enemy with what are now described as rear guard actions. Drawing the enemy farther and farther from base or the sources of supplies, wearing their troops more than he wearied his own and delaying a battle until he reached ground where his position would give him a great advantage—a position against superior numbers—where the loss in men and morale of the assailants must be great and where at the proper moment the counterstroke could be delivered with high promise of success, the tactics of Fabius won.

In some ways the phrase "Fabian tactics" has been diverted from its original and proper significance and is made to comprehend any tactics of a particularly shrewd or "foxy" nature. In this connection it has been said that Napoleon employed "Fabian tactics" with brilliant success at Austerlitz. The combined Austrian and Russian armies greatly extended their line in an effort to turn the right flank of the French army and cut his communications. It seemed as though this move would succeed, for Napoleon permitted it to develop without serious resistance. Then he suddenly concentrated his whole strength at the center, with the exception of a portion of Bernadotte's corps, which he left to deal with the Austrian turning force, and burst through the line, destroying one wing of the Austrian army as it retreated.

Historians of Rome deal at considerable length with a family called the Fabii. It is narrated that this ancient and renowned family undertook the duty of defending Roman territory against incursions by the Veientes and for this purpose established themselves at a place on the Cremera river. The Fabii were drawn into ambush and were all killed. The date of that event is given as B. C. 477.

A boy of the family Fabii had been left in Rome, and he became the second founder of the family. Fabius Maximus, who won his laurels and his spurs in the second Punic war, was descended from that boy, and there was another famous member of the family whose name was Fabius Pictor, who wrote a history of Rome and who is often referred to as the earliest Roman historian.—Washington Star.

In a Quandary.
"It—er—seems," said he, regarding the unfortunate with scientific interest, "that the attacks of fever and chills appear on alternate days. Do you think—is it your opinion—that they have, so to speak, decreased in violence, if I may use that word?"
The patient smiled feebly. "Doc," said he, "on fever days my head's so hot I can't think, and on some days I shake so I can't hold an opinion."—New York Globe.

Holland's Waterstaet.
Holland is a department of state, with a cabinet minister at the head of it, for her "waterstaet" an untranslatable word, which means practically the state of all waters from the field drain in the polders to the Rhine at winter level. They are all linked up in one scheme in an office at The Hague.—London Express.

MEDICINAL TREES.

A Dozen Varieties in This Country That Need Attention.

There are about a dozen trees growing in the United States which are entirely or partly for medicines. On account of the enormous quantities required it is a foregone conclusion that in the not far distant future trees will have to be planted to meet the demand that is fast growing, or else we shall suffer from the lack of necessary drugs.

The presence of hydrocyanic acid in the thin inner bark of the wild cherry and its tonic and sedative properties make the tree valuable. It is gathered in the fall, and a fresh supply is required each year, as it loses strength if kept too long.

Witch hazel plays a prominent part in the medicine chest of every household today and represents in its manufacture many thousands of dollars in invested capital. The Indian knew of its healing properties long before the white man came.

The New England farmers find the witch hazel crop one of much value and a regular source of income. The brush is taken to the local distillery, where the essential properties are extracted. While it is usually classified as a shrub, it has been known to grow to the height of twenty-five feet. It also has the peculiarity of blooming very late in the fall.

The bark of the slippery elm is highly prized for the relief of colds and to allay inflammations. This tree grows to the height of from forty to seventy feet, with a trunk two and one-half feet thick. The outer bark is shaved off and the inner one removed and dried under pressure in order to keep it flat. The dried bark is remarkable for its small proportion of weight to bulk.

The white pine, which plays such an important part in building industries, is conspicuous among trees possessing medicinal properties.

These four are among the best known and most widely used of nature's remedies growing wild in the woods. There are others of various kinds and degrees of usefulness. The tamarack and the aspen, both of them esteemed as tonics; the white willow, a tonic, a febrifuge and sometimes used for rheumatism; the butternut, whose bark serves as a tonic and a mild cathartic; sweet birch, best known as the principal ingredient in birch beer; the white oak, with its astringent bark, and, perhaps as popular as any bark that grows, the sassafras.—New York American.

The First Fires.

Speaking of wonderful inventions; the overshadower of Edison is the man—or woman—who invented fire. Our prehistoric ancestors doubtless were familiar with fire from lightning strokes and lava eruptions. But how did they ever get the idea that they could imitate the effects of lightning by rubbing two sticks against each other? It has been observed in recent years that in bamboo forests of southern India branches sometimes are whipped by the wind against each other until they burst into flame. That probably was where the fire inventor got his idea.—Kansas City Star.

The Genius of Language.

It makes a difference with a vengeance what tongue we employ to convey ideas of proper names. Thus, our notion of Vienna, in its assigned and native dwelling place, is Wena. Your Frenchman, insisting that the cockney does not know his own, converts London into Londres.

We superior English speaking school-masters, defying birthright and the custom of the ages, make it appear that Roma is merely monosyllabic Rome; that Venetia is Venice; that Koeln is Cologne, and so on through the world.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mrs. Caroline C. Rushton.

Mrs. Caroline C. Rushton passed away at her home on Main street last Sunday at the age of 80 years 4 months 15 days. The deceased was born in Coventry, Eng., Nov. 6, 1834. She leaves a son, Thomas Rushton, and a daughter, Mrs. R. W. Townsend, with whom she lived. The funeral was from her late home Wednesday, at 1 o'clock. Services were conducted by Rev. Henry C. Alvord. The body was taken to Forest Hills cemetery for cremation.

Ernest Linwood Miles.

The bride has been an active member of the First Baptist church and is a graduate of Whitman High school in the class of '09. For the past few years she has been employed in the office of the Commonwealth Shoe Co.

Optimistic Thought.

Good management is better than a good income.

IN OUR TOWN.

It's about time the firemen had a rest!

Another evidence that spring is upon us—the Bay State Street Railway has taken down its snow fences about town.

We don't pretend to know very much about the matter of oil or water being best to stop the dust from blowing around in clouds, but we do know that we have eaten our "peck of dirt" the past two or three weeks and about everybody else in town has done likewise. If we are to have oil, let's have it and if we are to have water, let's have that, as the weatherman doesn't seem to have any mercy on our throats, or our feelings. We don't know just what officials the matter is up to, but give us some relief Mr. Official if possible.

Now that we are told that the Bay State St. R. R. is to have double running boards on its open cars this season to help the wearer of the tight skirt, we learn that the style this summer will be dresses that are from three to ten yards about the bottom. The style makers must have a grudge against the railroads.

School lets out in town this afternoon for the annual Spring vacation and scholars and teachers alike are wearing a wide smile.

Did you read "Doc" Fabyan's column last week? It is better still this week.

The writer had occasion to take a walk well up into Pond Plain a few days ago and never having been up in that section in the day-time before, we were struck with the unbelievable compactness and size of the village across the railroad tracks.

We wonder how many citizens of the town know how large and well populated Pond Plain is at this time? It is growing larger all the time and the buildings with their many up-to-date improvements are among the best in town.

It would indeed be a pleasant walk for any of the townspeople to take an afternoon stroll up through the district and see a fine section of our town that probably not one in ten knows very much about.

We are told that the Pond Plain Improvement association and the citizens in general are all working in harmony to better their district and with better travelling facilities Pond Plain should become a very important village of our town.

Safety first—keep your matches, cigarette ashes etc. away from grass and brush and then the fire ladders won't get a hurry-up call in a few hours for a bad fire.

G. R. Kempl the Washington Square druggist is to hold a "One Cent" sale next week and it will pay every one in town to read his ad in this issue and then take advantage of the novel sale during its three day-run.

In our travels about town we hear a lot about the movies. This form of amusement has certainly struck a popular note with the amusement loving public the past few years. Just at present the local movie followers are dividing their time between "The Exploits of Elaine" and "The Master Key."

The Norfolk boys showed their rival, the Union Glee Club squad a few wrinkles in pool, billiards, chess, whist etc. during the past winter according to the final score of the series between the two clubs after the last matches on Friday night last. Fine work South Weymouth!

Ladies! The editor of this paper has started a column for your club and society notes, are you going to help make it a success? If you belong to any club or society, and most of you do, send in your items early and help to boom the women and their doings in our town. Mail your items to 10 Commercial street, Weymouth, or phone Weymouth 145.

Surprise Party.

One of the most popular young couples in Weymouth, were tendered a surprise party in the Assembly Hall of the Clapp Memorial Association last Friday evening, by the ladies' and men's bowling clubs of that association.

Lewis D. Loring and Miss Nellie Powers were the surprised parties. For several weeks plans for this affair had been going on by a committee selected from the club members and they did their work in perfect secrecy.

"Lou" and "Nell" were led to believe that "Mr. Hobbs" was in the hall exhibiting Bowling Prizes and that they were needed to help select suitable prizes for the various teams. Upon reaching the hall they found about fifty friends ready to greet them and then the fun started.

The "Lenox" orchestra furnished music throughout the evening. B. J. Elkington on behalf of the two bowling clubs presented the couple with a substantial purse.

Ice cream and cake were served by the ladies and at a late hour the party broke up all wishing "Lou" and "Nell" the best of Health, Happiness and Prosperity in the future.

Celebrate 19th. Anniversary.

Ladies Auxiliary to Sons of Veterans Entertains Extra Large Gathering in Masonic Temple Last Tuesday Evening. Many Special Guests in Attendance.

An event each year, that always attracts an extra large crowd of real lovers of genuine good times, is the annual celebration of the birthday of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Gen. James L. Bates Camp Sons of Veterans of this town. The nineteenth anniversary was observed on Tuesday evening last in Masonic Temple, East Weymouth, and as in former years, the delicious supper menu, the dancing and the ever present spirit of good cheer, coupled with grand weather conditions, drew over two hundred and fifty to the event.

The affair opened at 6:30 o'clock when a very appetizing banquet was served in the lower hall of the building. The menu included the following edibles: roast turkey, cranberry sauce, escalloped oysters, chicken and potato salads, fancy pies, gelatin with cream, ices, rolls and coffee. Over 225 sat down to the repast.

Boston Theatre To Have A Season Of Grand Opera In English.

New England music lovers will be pleased with the announcement of the coming of the Aborn English Grand Opera company to the Boston Theatre for a limited engagement, beginning Monday April 5th. The favorite artists who have been heard in Boston before will return for the coming Spring season, with many other notables added. There will be eight performances each week, including Wednesday and Saturday matinees, and the prices will be popular—25c to $1.00. The final result of the popular voting test, instituted for the purpose of ascertaining just what operas would meet with the widest favor in Boston has just been brought to a close. Nearly a month ago the management began distributing voting post cards among music lovers. Upon one side of these cards forty operas were named, from which selection could be made, and on the opposite side the address of Milton and Sargent Aborn, Century Opera House, New York city, was printed.

The fifteen operas standing first in order of popularity are, "Madam Butterfly", "Aida", "Hansel and Gretel", "Il Trovatore", "Lohengrin", "The Tales of Hoffman", "Carmen", "Lucia di Lammermoor", "The Jewels of the Madonna", "La Boheme", "Faust", "Cavalleria Rusticana", "Romeo and Juliet", "Samson and Delilah", "Pagliacci".

In accordance with this popular vote, the repertoire for the first two weeks have been announced as follows: Week beginning April 5th, "Aida" and "Madam Butterfly", four performances each. Week beginning April 12th "Lohengrin" and "Il Trovatore", four performances each, with extra matinees of "Hansel and Gretel" on Tuesday and Friday, April 13th and 16th.

SERIOUS ERROR IN WEYMOUTH.

Weymouth Citizens Will Do Well to Profit by the Following.

Many fatal cases of kidney disease have reached an incurable stage because the patient did not understand the symptoms. Even today in Weymouth there are many residents making the same serious error. They attribute their mysterious aches and pains to overwork, or worry, perhaps, when all the time their rheumatic pains, backache and bladder irregularities are most probably due to weak and ailing kidneys. If you are ill, if your kidneys are out of order, profit by this Weymouth resident's experience.

Asa K. Binney, 112 Broad St., Weymouth, says: "I can't say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. I have taken several boxes for lame back and other kidney disorders and I never fail to get relief. I am just as enthusiastic about Doan's Kidney Pills now as I was when I gave a statement praising them some years ago. Today I gladly confirm all I have ever said about this remedy."

Mr. Binney is only one of many Weymouth people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Binney had, the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. ## Historic Black Forest.

The Black forest has a charm that can be found in no other part of the world. The hills and valleys abound in pine woods of so dark a green as to be almost black. And from these the forest takes its name. And these trees do give it such a black appearance that it looks forbidding and makes a chill go down one's back. Its hills are as dark as its history.

Returning to Older Things.

Scholars say that the tendency toward symbolism in painting and all the arts is but the swing of the pendulum. The world has grown old and weary and tired of its dry-as-dust philosophies and is going back to the times when all the peoples of the earth dreamed of great mysteries in little things; when the highest ritual of all religions was the dances in the hills which ended in strange stupors, and humanity first imagined the country of the gods.

The Poetry of Woman.
Man is like disconnected and uncouth prose, without harmony or beauty. That is why poets have always compared women with song, poetry, flower and river, but have never thought of comparing man with any of these. Woman, like most beautiful things in nature, is connected, well-developed and well-restrained.—The Craftsman

GENERAL BARN AND DAIRY STABLE

Will Be Found to Save Much Time in the Performance of Chore Work.

SILLO BUILT AT THE SIDE

While That Construction Is Not General There Are Reasons Why It Is So Placed in the Design That Is Described Here.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 127 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

These illustrations show a combination of general purpose farm and storage barn with a dairy stable that is entirely separate except that it has a doorway connection with the storage barn from which feed is carried to the cows.

The main barn has a large deep mow for the storage of alfalfa and clover hay and bright, clean straw. It is an easy chore to supply this roughage to the cows by means of a feed carrier which runs the whole length of the feed alley.

There are plenty of dairymen who buy ciders from flavoring the milk.

The feeding arrangements in this barn and dairy stable are exceptionally convenient. Silage is loaded into carriers in the silo feed room, and the other roughage and grain feeds come from the storage barn, both of which are convenient to the stable. To increase the storage capacity sufficiently to provide abundance of roughage for both horses and cows, the hay mow on one side of the barn starts from the floor. In old-fashioned barns this kind of a mow is called a bay.

There is stabling for six or seven horses, and the space in front of the horses is intended for storage of a few vehicles. In fact, the large barn has a general-purpose floor that may be utilized in a good many different ways. It is a threshing floor once a year.

The cow stable, however, is intended for the production of large quantities of pure milk so that no other business can be tolerated inside of this modern dairy stable.

Outside of the main stable is a corn crib 36 by 10 feet. The inside ends of the crib are made as open to the atmosphere as possible by using open work metal sides. It is a little cheaper to build a crib in this way, because there is a saving in material. There must be an air space between the corn and the solid boarding of the barn. This space may be secured by placing the open metal siding on furring strips to hold the corn away from the solid boarding of the barn.

The foundation of the corn crib is concrete, which is the only satisfactory material for the foundation of any farm building. There is no objection to working in stone where stone is plentiful, but there should be enough concrete to fill all the voids. The only way to control rats and mice on a farm is to build concrete foundaobject to having hay stored over the dairy cows, because of the dust that floats everywhere through the stable when the hay is transferred from the mow to the cows at feeding time.

Because the storage barn is placed at one end of the cow stable, the silo is built at the side because at least one end of the stable should have a free connection with the open barnyard.

While this arrangement is somewhat unusual, there is really no objection to putting a silo at the side of the stable, because the distance to travel at feeding time is about the same.

Always in placing buildings it is a good plan to figure the distance to travel in doing the work. A few feet more than necessary makes considerable extra walking during the winter when multiplied by the travel back and forth every chore time.

The stable has a thoroughly well-made concrete floor built in the usual way with mangers and iron stall partitions. The center feed alley, manure alley and manure gutters at the sides are all arranged for the use of labor-saving machinery.

Sanitary stables contain very light and simple fixtures. The object is to reduce the ledges and obstructions that catch and hold dust and dirt.

Iron stall partitions, concrete floor and mangers, smooth sides and ceilings are necessary to hold down the bacteria content of the milk to meet the requirements of dairy inspection. For the same reason especial attention is being paid to dairy stable ventilation.

tions and concrete floors. Rats will dig around a stone wall and they are very much at home among loose stones, but they hate concrete.

WORK OF THE SUBMARINE

Undersea Supply Bases Perfectly Feasible, According to an American Builder.

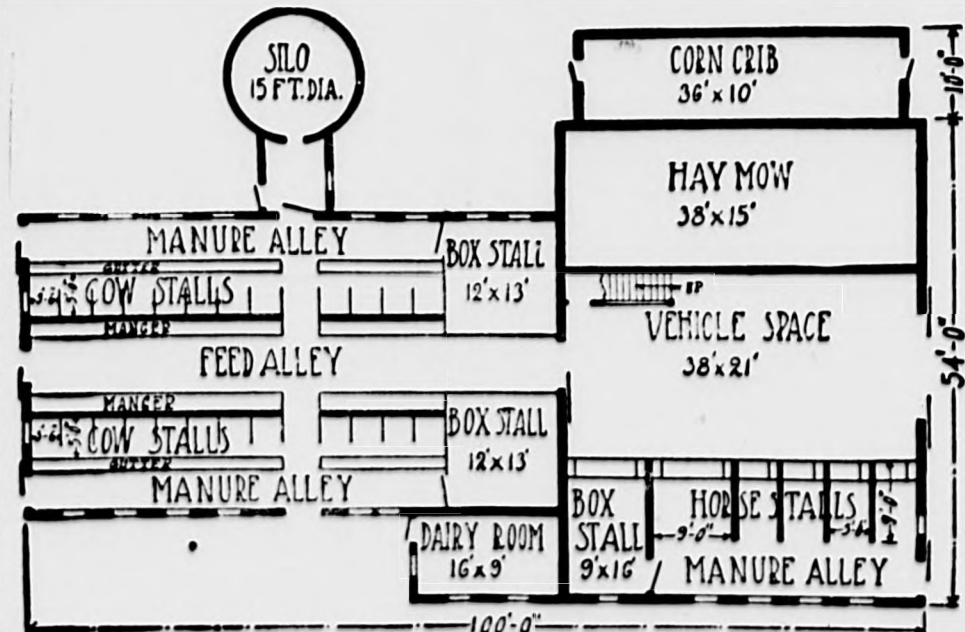

"I do not know whether Germany has submerged supply stations for her submarine fleet, but such a scheme is feasible," said Simon Lake, the builder of submarines, in an interview.

"On account of the success of Germany's undersea craft in their raids on English commerce," he went on, "I long ago formed the opinion that they had such stations, and from their latest threat against British commerce, I am more convinced than ever that they have."

"The German submarine is practically a lake boat, in that it is supplied with a diving compartment. It is easy for a man in a diving suit to leave the submarine when it is submerged."

The German submarine has the Diesel engine, which uses crude oil. It is no great problem to have submerged tanks for crude oil. I long ago perfected such a tank myself. As regards supplies of food, that is a still simpler problem. It is only a matter of packing food in water-tight packages.

"Supply stations along the English coast would enable a German submarine to continue its activities

Main Floor Plan of Barn No. A236.

The interior of dairy stables is made air tight as nearly as possible. The supply of fresh air is regulated by intake flues and the foul air is carried off by flues which connect with the roof.

There is a sanitary dairy room with a concrete floor just outside of the stable. It is built of two by four studs, above the concrete floor, and is covered with building paper both inside and outside. Clapboards cover the outside and the inside is celled with plain matched ceiling without beading. There is no direct connection between the stable and the dairy room. This is arranged especially to prevent station for months. These underwater stations would be temporary affairs, and the supplies would be brought by their fast torpedo boats, which could get away after sinking the supplies, leaving the submarine behind to continue operations.

"The large submarine boat can operate 500 miles from its base. That, in my opinion, explains the sudden appearance of submarines in the Irish sea, attacking the British merchant ships."—Bridgeport (Conn.) Cor. New York Times.

By Proxy?

A well-known metropolitan choral conductor was once holding voice trials preliminary to the organization of a colored choral club of jubilee singers. One of the soprano applicants was extremely reticent when asked to sing a scale. Finally the director, becoming impatient, asked: "What's the matter—don't you sing?" "Well," she hesitatingly replied, "not personally."

FRIDAY, MARCH 26, 1915

A sure sign of spring—the annual base ball guide is out.

On Monday the British Prize Court awarded $600,000 for the hold-up of the Wilhelmina and her cargo of grain, and it now remains to be seen how long it will take for the said $600,000 to reach the real losers by the detention of the ship and cargo.

We hear much about gypsy and brown tail moths and spend fortunes in their suppression but one only has to go back to last year and the year before to see more unsightly scenes, great destruction of foliage and loss of fruit than is caused by either of the above pests in the work of the tant caterpillar. We are glad to note that the State Board of Agriculture is trying to inaugurate a war on these pests by drafting school boys into the service. The idea is a good one and a well organized system of work would not take so very much of the boy's time and the result would well pay for the time spent.

The equator is an imaginary line dividing the globe into two hemispheres, north and south, but as one travels in either direction from that imaginary line he finds people and methods materially different and thus it is in regard to the line which separates Weymouth from Braintree, especially in reference to Town Meeting. In Weymouth we take a day for business purposes and whether the warrant contains more or less articles we can go home before milking time with the warrant finished and in the main people fairly well pleased with the result. In Braintree it is two, three or four protracted meetings and it goes without saying that a Braintree town meeting puts on record large volumes of talk, much of which brings the blood of opposing factions above fever heat.

Made in the U. S. A. is the motto of the Woman's National Made-in-America League. It is a good motto designed to all and support American industries but to get nearer home, now is a good time to establish this motto, Raised in Weymouth. We hear much about men out of employment, men working in factories on short time, etc. At the same time we see these same men buying at the store products of the farming lands of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and the far west. What is the matter with Raised in Weymouth. We have hundreds of acres of land which has not been pastured nor the soil turned up to the sun light for ages. Now is the time for those with large acreage to map out work for the unemployed; or even the men at work on short time to procure a little garden plot near home and raise stuff for their own table where a good meal of home raised vegetables would save a part of the money earned in short time work in the factory.

"Should two pieces of motor fire apparatus be sent to all bell alarms in town?" There are arguments galore, both in the negative and affirmative, on this question. We believe the efficiency of the fire department is improved considerably by carrying out the order of two combinations at each fire, if it is an alarm from a box in town. We are told that it is a needless expense! We acknowledge that such is the case in nine cases out of ten, but now that we have four good combinations in town, it appears to our way of thinking that every citizen in this town must feel safer every moment of the day, and especially at night, knowing that if anything happens to one machine, either starting or on the way, another combination is racing over the roads to check the flames before serious damage is done. We have a "Peoples Column" department in this paper, and we would be glad to publish any articles of comment or ordinary length on this subject, both for and against the present method of having two trucks at each fire.

The Great and General Court let out a link last week and is working for a record by closing business in May which has not been done for many years. The week began with a morning and afternoon session as most of the committee reports are in and members have more time for regular sessions and are also cutting down time on unimportant bills. For instance the lonely one Socialist, who had in three measures last year on which the House devoted nearly a week got his finish this year in fifteen minutes and the celebrated cat license bill on which the House devoted the best part of a week, a year ago, was quieted in less than twenty minutes and cats can still have their midnight howls without a license. Many other bills of equal importance are quickly consigned to oblivion or the next General Court. There is, however, one measure

Town Business.

The Selectmen gave a hearing on the petition of Elmer E. Sargent for gasoline license and granted the same.

A hearing on petition of the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. to locate a pole near the corner of Middle and Washington streets was granted.

The Light & Power Co. filed a petition for permit to locate 8 poles on Howard street and the N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. filed petition for 16 poles, 3 on Norfolk street, 1 Granite, 3 Norton, 4 Summit and 5 on Federal.

It will be remembered that the town at its annual meeting voted $5000 for improvement of Washington street from Main street to the Hingham line provided the County would add $5000 for the same purpose and on Monday the Selectmen took action by asking the County commissioner to join in the work.

As a precaution against the spread of rabies on account of a mad dog in Ward 5 last week it has been ordered that all dogs in that Ward shall be restrained or wear a muzzle until June 22nd.

At the annual town meeting voted to borrow $50,000 in anticipation of taxes and the Selectmen asked bids for the same which bids were opened on Monday, R. L. Day & Co. of Boston being the successful bidder, taking the entire loan in ten votes of $5,000 each payable Oct. 20 at 3.18 per cent. There were five bids, ranging from 3.18 to 3.45.

There was an unusually large field of applicants for the position of Superintendent of Streets but the position went to the present incumbent John F. Maynard and the selectmen have begun their annual inspection of all the roads with a view of laying out the seasons work. Thus far they find much less wash outs than usual on account of freshets.

James W. Eldridge accepts the position of superintendent of the Town Home; Russell H. Whiting Town Engineer and P. Worthen Town Counsel who thinks it a distinguished honor to represent a town which stands so well among the towns and cities of the Commonwealth.

Among other business matters of Monday was the acceptance of the bond of the town treasurer $25,000, the appointment of Rufus O. Clark as grand juror for the Superior court at Dedham and a permit to Hiram Nadell to move a building from North to Neck street by way of Shaw-street.

Some time ago the Selectmen asked for bids for printing Hon. Louis A. Cooks report of his trip to England as representative of the town at the celebration in Weymouth England of the anniversary of sailing of John Endicott the first governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and those bids, from four different printers in Weymouth, were opened on Monday. The selectmen asked for proposals for 500 copies and 1000 copies.

The electric light committee have placed five new lights on Randolph street continuing from Forest street, two more on Main street between the residence of Frank Marble and John Flynn and one light on Union street near the residence of Frank Whitman.

The Board of Fire Engineers met Tuesday evening. Lewis Blanchard's resignation as substitute driver of the combinations in town was accepted and George Hunt of East Weymouth was appointed to fill the vacancy.

A hearing was granted 30 petitioners of Pond Plain by the Board of Health last evening in regard to a skunk farm on Pond street which they claim to be a common nuisance.

At the meeting yesterday afternoon of the Selectmen, the Board contracted with the Barrett Mfg. Co. of Boston for 40,000 gallons of Tarvia B., the first shipment to be on April 6.

pending which from our standpoint needs to be nipped in the bud, viz., a bill to add 50 cents per $1000 on all municipal taxes under the supervision of the State Board of Education for educational purposes. While we believe in a liberal appropriation for schools it occurs to us that we have about reached our ability but if we are to raise another $9,000 let it be spent in Weymouth and by Weymouth officials.

All that was mortal of Charles Francis Adams, who died in Washington, D. C., on Saturday, the 20th instant found a resting place at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, Quincy, Tuesday afternoon. Weymouth in a sense may claim Mr. Adams to have been one of her noted sons. Opposite the Universalist church at North Weymouth may be seen the house which was once the home of Parson Smith of the First church, and in it was born Abigail Smith, who married John Adams, one the signers of the Declaration of Independence and later became the 2d president of the United States and the name, Abigail Adams, has come down through history as one of the brightest women who ever graced the White House. Charles Francis 2d, of whom we write today, was a great-grandson of Abigail Adams and had a world wide reputation as a historian and publisher. He was the orator of the day in 1873 at the 250th anniversary of the settlement of Weymouth and to him, present and future historians will be largely indebted for valuable statistics. It was once in the air that Mr. Adams was to erect a monument on Weymouth Great hill in honor of the early settlers and let us hope that the monument may be found mentioned in his will.

Culture Looks Beyond.

Culture looks beyond machinery, culture hates hatred; culture has one great passion—the passion for sweetness and light. It has one even yet greater, the passion for making them all prevail. It is not satisfied till we all come to a perfect man; it knows that the sweetness and light of the few must be imperfect until the raw and unkindly masses of humanity are touched with sweetness and light.—Matthew Arnold

FIRE RECORD STILL HIGH.

Combinations About Town Kept Busy Past Week Fighting Woods and Grass Fires.

In spite of the fact that the results of carelessness and lack of proper caution were clearly demonstrated in the fire record of last week, the past week's list of calls for the fire department about town continues to be large. The public should be considerably more careful to have absolute control over all grass fires at this time in the year, when everything is extra dry, and the attention of those contemplating having grass or rubbish fires, is called to a law prohibiting such fires unless a permit is obtained.

The extracts from Acts 1911, Article 244, Section 1, follows:

"It shall be unlawful within any city, or within any town which accepts the provisions of this act, for any person to set a fire in the open air between the first day of March and the first day of December, except by the written permission of the forest warden. . . . Whoever violates the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than one month, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

Permits may be obtained from the following in town: Ward 1, W. J. Sladen and Hiram Nadell; Ward 2, H. Frank Holmes; Ward 3, J. Ross South; Ward 4, N. R. Ellis; Ward 5, W. F. Hall and E. S. Wright. Safety First, don't let your fire get away from you!

WARD 4.

Box 441 on March 20 at 10 50 A. M. called the boys of Comb. 5 to a fire on Park street near the Hingham line for a woods fire which was threatening a house occupied by Mrs. Kingsley. Hose 3 also responded. While the firemen were getting control, box 45 blew in calling them to another woods fire in the rear of Stowell Bros. grocery store on Main street and after another hour's battle the men were allowed to go to their homes leaving Hose 4 with a line of hose laid in case the strong wind should start up the fire once more.

WARD 2.

The Ward 2 boys, with Harold Hawes in charge, were kept pretty busy the past week, although we are glad to report that fewer calls were received than for last week. The record follows:

Friday, Mar. 19, at 1.10 P. M., box 16, North Weymouth, responded to fire at John Veaders, Comb. 2 assisted materially in saving a nearby cottage.

Mar. 19, on way home from box 16 blaze, called to residence of James Jones, Weymouth Heights, fire in chimney. Small loss.

Friday, Mar. 19, 2.30 P. M. still alarm, grass and woods, Essex street, three solid hard hours of fighting.

Saturday, March 20, at 11 A. M. phone call, grass near Station avenue.

Saturday, March 20, at 8.30 P. M. box 19, Weymouth Heights, grass near Mt. Vernon house on King Oak Hill. Chauffeur Hawes drove truck to very top of hill, the machine making the climb without a whimper.

Monday, March 22, at 7 P. M. phone call, grass near residence of W. E. Dizer on Chard street.

Tuesday, March 23, box 14, North Weymouth, grass at Vessagussett.

WARD 3.

The alarm from box 37 shortly after eleven o'clock last night called the department to the Universalist church where someone had set a Christmas tree afire that had been thrown out on the ash heap. A passerby saw the blaze and telephoned to fire headquarters at East Weymouth and the alarm was pulled in from that place. There was no damage.

EAST BRAINTREE.

The alarm from box 23 East Braintree, Saturday afternoon was for a fire in the woods in the rear of the dwelling of Mrs. Francis L. King on Brookside road.

BOX 21.

The alarm from box 21 Wednesday at 12.45, was for a serious grass fire on the Moody Land Company's property on Quincy avenue, East Braintree. Isaac Sexton discovered the fire, and was fighting the flames all alone, but soon realizing the magnitude of the fire sent a boy to pull in the alarm. In the meantime the blaze had been discovered by R. B. Worster and others in Weymouth, and a party started for the scene in Mr. Worster's auto. This squad succeeded in checking the blaze from reaching a large barn in the path of the flames. Chief Tenney and Engineer Whitmarsh of Hose 3, East Braintree, with the auto truck, responded to the alarm, which came in shortly after the arrival of the Weymouth contingent. Just previous to the ringing of the alarm Chief Billings of the Quincy fire department was returning from his fourth fire less than an hour in the Granite City, when he noticed the dense smoke in the direction of Quincy avenue. Thinking the fire might be in his district he at once hustled toward East Braintree and when he found it was over the line he kept on, and helped materially with the big chemical tank attached to his auto. Several acres were burned over. While at this fire an alarm from box 125 called Chief Tenney to a grass fire in the rear of the house of Mr. Hussey on Liberty street. Engineer Whitmarsh was left in charge of the Quincy avenue fire.

POULTRY

RUNNER DUCK IS PROFITABLE

Houses Need Not Be Expensive—Low Fence Will Confine Them—Feed Is Comparatively Cheap.

Seven dollars profit from a duck is pretty good money. At the Hawkesbury Agricultural college in New South Wales, Australia, that was the average made by six pencilled Runner ducks. Each duck laid an average of 267 eggs in a year. A record like this justifies the title that has been given the Runner—the Leghorn of the duck family.

Runners are not difficult to raise. The houses need not be expensive, and if the ducks are yarded a low fence will keep them confined. They appreciate a pool of water or a running stream, but will do well with only plenty of water to drink. It must be provided in deep receptacles, however, so that the ducks can wet their heads entirely over. Otherwise their breathing apparatus gets clogged up and the ducks suffer.

Ducks eat more than hens do, but much of the ration may consist of feed that is comparatively cheap. Mashies of cooked vegetables in which corn meal, bran, ground alfalfa or clover is mixed make good bulk feed for ducks. But ducks are by no means vegetarians and some meat scraps must be fed—except in summer when they have access to ponds or streams where they may find some animal food. Duck eggs are heavier than are hen eggs. Two duck eggs are about equal

A Nice Pair of Runners.

In weight to three hen eggs. They are rich flavored and have no objectionable strong taste except as it may be caused by improper food.

The pencilled Runner is a variety much favored because of the pure white eggs it lays. Some strains of the pure white Runners lay uniformly white eggs also.

SIMPLE WAY OF FATTENING

The simplest way of fattening chickens is to place them in a fattening crate. The crate should be six feet long, 16 inches wide and 18 inches high. The bottom, back and top are slatted lengthwise, and in front the slats are placed on the upright. On the bottom they are an inch and a quarter apart, and on the back, top and front two inches apart. The slats are seven-eighths of an inch wide, and five-eighths of an inch thick. The crate is divided into three compartments, and each one opens up separately by a hinged top.

A trough for feed is placed on strips in front. The crate is strengthened by having slats three-quarters of an inch thick and an inch and a half wide in each corner of the crate, running lengthwise. The ends and the partition can also be made of solid wood in order to strengthen the crate.

Ordinary inch mesh wire nailed to the bottom of the crate will answer the purpose of a floor better than a slatted bottom, as there will be less accumulation of droppings, therefore making the crate more sanitary.

Best Sellers in Poultry.

At the time when the prices for market poultry are best the cost of production is the greatest. Consumers soon learn what quality is in fowls, and then they demand it. Buyers of dressed poultry do not prefer the big, rough, coarse fowl when they are selecting for their tables. This class of fowl is pushed aside and the plump, solid ones are selected instead.

Additional Eggs Mean Profit.

If a hen only lays one egg a week for a year, it will pay for her food, and every additional egg means profit. If a hen lays three eggs a week she will give double the profit derived from a hen that lays two eggs. The greater the number of eggs the cheaper the cost of production in proportion.

Place for Dust Bath.

If you keep a box of ashes or road dust in the hen house, and you ought to, it should be kept where the sun will strike it the greater part of the day.

Good Advice About Oilcloth.
After washing oilcloth and linoleum, be sure to dry it properly. If left damp it will speedily rot and soon become totally ruined. It is a great mistake to use too much water for washing it. The cloth should be wrung out and passed lightly over the surface.

The Artist.
The whole function of the artist in the world is to be a seeing and a feeling creature; to be an instrument of such tenderness and sensitiveness that no shadow, no hue, no line, no instantaneous and evanescent expression of the visible things around him, nor any of the emotions which they are capable of conveying to the spirit which has been given him, shall either be left unrecorded or fade from the book of record—Ruskin.

She Found Her Vocation

By EUNICE BLAKE

Helen Warfield when nineteen years of age, by the death of first her father and a few months later her mother, found herself responsible for the support of herself and several brothers and sisters very much younger than herself. What should she do to feed and clothe her little ones? She had shown some talent in private theatricals for histrionics and had been told that she would achieve success on the stage. An old friend of her mother offered to advance a certain sum by which she might receive some education as an actress, and Helen availed herself of it, taking lessons of an elocutionist.

Her instructor did not encourage her. He told her that her enunciation was peculiar to herself and that it was unattractive. As for her action, especially her facial expression, it was all that could be desired. But she could not hope to please with that alone, and her enunciation would so repel an audience that her valuable qualities would not be appreciated.

Helen's friends told her that this was rubbish. She had pleased private audiences and she would with the same gifts please the public. Helen believed them because she preferred to believe them. She did not know that intimate friends, even if competent critics, will seldom give an unbiased criticism. As for professional critics, while they may judge as to what is artistic, when it comes to judging what the public will fancy they are as much at sea as any one else.

Helen, encouraged by her friends, persevered. After a hasty preparation she attempted, with the assistance of friends, to get an engagement. She was offered parts in which she would have but a few words to say, but she felt that they would give her no opportunity to show what she could do, and she pushed on for something better. Finally, at the earnest solicitation of a friend, she was given a trial. It was arranged that she should understudy for a part that would test her powers, and the person whom she was understudying agreed to give way to her as soon as she was ready to make the trial.

In due time she appeared in the role she had been preparing for. She made a dismal failure. She felt her part, acted her part, but she could not speak her part. As her preceptor had warned her, her enunciation spoiled the whole. "What shall I do?" she moaned. "I have spent the money furnished me to study and have failed."

Helen's heart sank within her. What—give up her dreams of having her name posted in enormous letters as a famous actress, to be photographed for a ten cent show! Horrible! Nevertheless, going home to a lot of hungry children, with nothing to buy food for them, sent her the next day to a studio where a picture play was just beginning to be made ready for presentation to the public. Although the manager had no experience at that early date in producing such plays, it occurred to him that the chief feature in them was the acting, especially the facial expression. Beauty was also an advantage, and Helen was comely.

Helen obeyed.

"Good! Now laugh. Good again! Look at me with naughty contempt. Excellent! You are condemned to death. You are an innocent girl listening to the first words of love. That will do. You have the power of expressing by your face what you feel. In your case words are not needed. What salary do you expect?"

"Whatever you choose to pay."

"I will start you at $25 a week, but I am sure you will soon be worth more than that."

Helen was surprised. How easy was the getting of this situation compared with her efforts to secure a trial at which she had failed! The manager advanced a week's salary, anxious to bind the bargain and fearing some other manager would get her away from him.

He gave her a part in the play that he was about making photographs for, and it was at once evident that she would make a great success. And she did.

Helen Warfield within a few months was receiving $100 a week and is now a prime movie favorite. She has seen the day when famous actors and actresses are proud to perform by photograph. She has a genius for interpreting humanity by expression, though she has no gift whatever for rendering it in speech. The plays selected for her are such as may be rendered in this way. She has acted the title role in some of the famous plays, but they are those in which the strength lies in the acting rather than the speech.

It is needless to add that Helen Warfield is making money, and feeding, clothing and educating her charges is a very simple matter. When she has acted her parts sufficiently to be photographed successfully in them her work is done, while her competitors on the stage are obliged to work on for every cent they receive.

POULTRY

Runner Duck is Profitable

Houses Need Not Be Expensive—Low Fence Will Confine Them—Feed is Comparatively Cheap.

Seven dollars profit from a duck is pretty good money. At the Hawkesbury Agricultural college in New South Wales, Australia, that was the average made by six penciled Runner ducks. Each duck laid an average of 267 eggs in a year. A record like this justifies the title that has been given the Runner—the Leghorn of the duck family.

Runners are not difficult to raise. The houses need not be expensive, and if the ducks are yarded a low fence will keep them confined. They appreciate a pool of water or a running stream, but will do well with only plenty of water to drink. It must be provided in deep receptacles, however, so that the ducks can wet their heads entirely over. Otherwise their breathing apparatus gets clogged up and the ducks suffer.

Ducks eat more than hens do, but much of the ration may consist of feed that is comparatively cheap. Mash of cooked vegetables in which corn meal, bran, ground alfalfa or clover is mixed make good bulk feed for ducks. But ducks are by no means vegetarians and some meat scraps must be fed—except in summer when they have access to ponds or streams where they may find some animal food.

Duck eggs are heavier than are hen eggs. Two duck eggs are about equal

in weight to three hen eggs. They are rich flavored and have no objectionable strong taste except as it may be caused by improper food.

The penciled Runner is a variety much favored because of the pure white eggs it lays. Some strains of the pure white Runners lay uniformly white eggs also.

SIMPLE WAY OF FATTENING

The simplest way of fattening chickens is to place them in a fattening crate. The crate should be six feet long, 16 inches wide and 18 inches high. The bottom, back and top are slatted lengthwise, and in front the slats are placed on the upright. On the bottom they are an inch and a quarter apart, and on the back, top and front two inches apart. The slats are seven-eighths of an inch wide, and five-eighths of an inch thick. The crate is divided into three compartments, and each one opens up separately by a hinged top.

A trough for feed is placed on strips in front. The crate is strengthened by having slats three-quarters of an inch thick and an inch and a half wide in each corner of the crate, running lengthwise. The ends and the partition can also be made of solid wood in order to strengthen the crate.

Ordinary inch mesh wire nailed to the bottom of the crate will answer the purpose of a floor better than a slatted bottom, as there will be less accumulation of droppings, therefore making the crate more sanitary.

Best Sellers in Poultry.

At the time when the prices for market poultry are best the cost of production is the greatest. Consumers soon learn what quality is in fowls, and then they demand it. Buyers of dressed poultry do not prefer the big, rough, coarse fowl when they are selecting for their tables. This class of fowl is pushed aside and the plump, solid ones are selected instead.

Additional Eggs Mean Profit.

If a hen only lays one egg a week for a year, it will pay for her food, and every additional egg means profit. If a hen lays three eggs a week she will give double the profit derived from a hen that lays two eggs. The greater the number of eggs the cheaper the cost of production in proportion.

Place for Dust Bath.

If you keep a box of ashes or road dust in the hen house, and you ought to, it should be kept where the sun will strike it the greater part of the day.

After washing oilcloth and linoleum, be sure to dry it properly. If left damp it will speedily rot and soon become totally ruined. It is a great mistake to use too much water for washing it. The cloth should be wrung out and passed lightly over the surface.

The Artist.

The whole function of the artist in the world is to be a seeing and a feeling creature; to be an instrument of such tenderness and sensitiveness that no shadow, no hue, no line, no instantaneous and evanescent expression of the visible things around him, nor any of the emotions which they are capable of conveying to the spirit which has been given him, shall either be left unrecorded or fade from the book of record—Ruskin.

She Found Her Vocation

Helen Warfield when nineteen years of age, by the death of first her father and a few months later her mother, found herself responsible for the support of herself and several brothers and sisters very much younger than herself. What should she do to feed and clothe her little ones? She had shown some talent in private theatricals for histrionics and had been told that she would achieve success on the stage. An old friend of her mother offered to advance a certain sum by which she might receive some education as an actress, and Helen availed herself of it, taking lessons of an elocutionist.

Her instructor did not encourage her. He told her that her enunciation was peculiar to herself and that it was unattractive. As for her action, especially her facial expression, it was all that could be desired. But she could not hope to please with that alone, and her enunciation would so repel an audience that her valuable qualities would not be appreciated.

Helen's friends told her that this was rubbish. She had pleased private audiences and she would with the same gifts please the public. Helen believed them because she preferred to believe them. She did not know that intimate friends, even if competent critics, will seldom give an unbiased criticism. As for professional critics, while they may judge as to what is artistic, when it comes to judging what the public will fancy they are as much at sea as any one else.

Helen, encouraged by her friends, persevered. After a hasty preparation she attempted, with the assistance of friends, to get an engagement. She was offered parts in which she would have but a few words to say, but she felt that they would give her no opportunity to show what she could do, and she pushed on for something better. Finally, at the earnest solicitation of a friend, she was given a trial. It was arranged that she should understudy for a part that would test her powers, and the person whom she was understudying agreed to give way to her as soon as she was ready to make the trial.

In due time she appeared in the role she had been preparing for. She made a dismal failure. She felt her part, acted her part, but she could not speak her part. As her preceptor had warned her, her enunciation spoiled the whole. "What shall I do?" she moaned. "I have spent the money furnished me to study and have failed."

"I have heard," said her instructor, "that these men who show moving photographs are beginning to give little plays. If you are in need of money you might make something in that way."

Helen's heart sank within her.

What give up her dreams of having her name posted in enormous letters as a famous actress, to be photographed for a ten cent show! Horrible! Nevertheless, going home to a lot of hungry children, with nothing to buy food for them, sent her the next day to a studio where a picture play was just beginning to be made ready for presentation to the public. Although the manager had no experience at that early date in producing such plays, it occurred to him that the chief feature in them was the acting, especially the facial expression. Beauty was also an advantage, and Helen was comely.

"Let me see you look like a thief caught red handed," he said.

"Good! Now laugh. Good again! Look at me with haughty contempt. Excellent! You are condemned to death. You are an innocent girl listening to the first words of love. That will do. You have the power of expressing by your face what you feel. In your case words are not needed. What salary do you expect?"

"Whatever you choose to pay."

"I will start you at $25 a week, but I am sure you will soon be worth more than that."

Helen was surprised. How easy was the getting of this situation compared with her efforts to secure a trial at which she had failed! The manager advanced a week's salary, anxious to bind the bargain and fearing some other manager would get her away from him.

THE CALLA AND ITS CULTURE

By BESSIE L. PUTNAM.

Rich soil, moisture, warmth, and sunshine are the key notes to success with the calla. It can—yes—must be made to bloom in winter without much sunshine if the other essentials are supplied.

If wanted for winter blooming it is best to let it rest in summer, turning the pot on its side, in some out of the way corner. Repot in September, filling in a layer of charcoal for drainage and food.

Over this put a layer of manure well rotted, and finish with a rich compost. Water sparingly until growth commences, and then the water can hardly be supplied too freely.

Always use warm water. The roots will enjoy it quite hot, but this is death to the stem. Some place a ring of tin around the base of the stem, pressing it down an inch into the soil. With this protection the hot water can be freely used.

Bottom heat may also be supplied by placing the pot on a hot brick. By keeping a pair of bricks for this purpose and alternating every 12 hours the buds can be forced more freely.

Give liquid manure once or twice a week, gradually increasing the dose as the plant seems to thrive.

Root the red spider by spraying with cold water, and the scale with soapsuds.

When two leaves appear successively from the same stalk, watch for a bud next. Others will succeed if through the winter if the treatment outlined is adhered to. Bottom heat, moisture, and all the sunshine possible are the best incentives to growth.

KEEPING UP THE LAWN

Kill weeds on the lawn by either pulling or cutting off the plant below the crown.

Don't mow the lawn too closely during the heated term; but do not allow weeds to go to seed.

Deep working, thorough pulverization, effective fertilization and a thorough raking and rolling down to a smooth level are all necessary to a smooth, level lawn.

Get your lawn seeds of a reliable seedsmen, and ask for the best and the freshest. Don't use old seed left over from last year, but insist on having it fresh, and of a good mixture.

The best time to seed a lawn is during the latter part of August or the early part of September. At that season, the heat is over and showers are almost sure to come, and the young grass will have several months of cool, moist weather in which to grow before winter.

THE PERENNIAL FLOWER BED

By JULIE ADAMS POWELL.

Last month we talked about the hardy bulbs. This month we are going to make a flower border of perennial plants, plants which sow their own seed and of plants that are biennials, and we are going to buy or beg them all.

Suppose we have a border from twenty to forty feet in length and from six to fifteen feet in depth. Or to fit our "estates," our border can be made much larger or very much smaller.

A border planted by a woman should not be over twenty by eight feet in size, for if she did all the work except the heavy digging, it might not be possible for her to give a larger one the right and necessary care.

Such a border should run north and south, and if possible, face the east. The background may be of hollyhocks, both single and double, golden-glow, the single tiger lily, the ever blooming flame flower, the tall meadow-rue, and tall meadow-sweet, set out alternately.

Then in front of these and at least two feet from them we will set out the pearl echinacea, some of the columbines, the choice of which are canadensis, chrysanthia, chrysanthia alba, carulia hybrida, skinneri, and California hybrida.

In the center of this row a hydrangea paniculata grandiflora would be very pretty, and to continue the row, hardy pompon chrysanthemums, the several blue varieties of larkspurs, moon penny daisies, Shasta daisies, fox gloves sweet williams, coreopsis, lanceolata grandiflora and an almost double variety, called "the golden fleece."

Nicotina affinis can be planted in this row early next spring and from year to year it will sow its own seed and will come up so close to where the old plants grew that it will not often need transplanting.

Then we will have the hardy gallardia, gysophylla paniculata, or baby's breath, lavender, Lychnis, rose campion, monarda didyma splendens, also called the bee balm and robin run-away, the Chinese bell flower, the hardy perennial poppies and the garden heliotrope.

A double border we will make of two heights of plants, setting the taller ones a little back of the very low ones. The snap dragon, the double anemone, the mullein pink, the sea pink, English daisies, the harebell, Canterbury bells, the hardy double and single pinks, the polyanthus, the hardy primroses and the English cowslips all will help to make our hardy flower bed a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The earth for a perennial border should be light and porous. Never try to raise flowers in soggy, wet soil. As soon as the plants are well rooted have a forkful of well-decayed stable manure spaded in well around each plant unless they are very small plants, then use your own good judgment.

Just before freezing weather a mulch two or three inches deep of stable manure should be spread over the bed a little heavier about each plant, and if the plants have any spindly branches they should all be trimmed back quite close.

ASHES DISCOURAGE BUGS

Especially among asters I find great value in ashes, containing as they do phosphates which tend toward sweetening the soil. No parasite will contentedly find courage to live in or enter such an unpleasant soil home. Ashes are also beneficial in strengthening and stiffening stalks and for this reason I advocate them for gladiolus beds—but not mixed with manure as some might do—rather strewn over the surface soil after fertilizers have been well worked in. When thus treated they seem to release the ammonia of the fertilizer, relieving it of its most valuable properties.

STOP RAPID TOP GROWTH

If a plant is growing too tall and lanky, (and nearly all want to), nip off the tip of each branch. This checks growth, forces the strength into the bark and will keep your plant in a more compact form.

Among the speedsters that East Weymouth boasts of are Morris Fitzgerald's two racers, Warren H. and Patriot. "Fitz" has kept his pair of prize winners in grand shape this winter, and says they will make the other horses in this section step some for the honors this coming season.

WRESTLING.

The New England A. A. V. championship are to be held in the Amory, Medford, Mass., under the auspices of the Lawrence Light Guards Athletic association, April 9 at 7 o'clock.

Competition in the following classes: 125 lb., 135 lb., 145 lb., 158 lb. and Heavyweight. The prizes will consist of standard N. E. A. A. U. die medals. Solid gold to first and solid silver to second.

The Clapp Memorial will have men in nearly all the classes.

Wrestling fans will be interested to know that John Kolk and A. Kolisto who won firsts in their respective classes in the tournament recently held in this town, also won first honors in the big A. A. U. tournament in Madison Square Garden, N. Y. and by so doing earn for themselves a free trip to the Panama Pacific Exposition where they will compete in the National and International championship.

BOXING.

A large delegation from East Weymouth attended the New England A. A. U. boxing championship in Mechanics building, Monday night and were treated to some fine exhibitions. As is the case in all tournaments of this kind the judges and the audience did not always agree on the winners of the various bouts but taken as a whole it was a great show.

The National championship will be held in Mechanics building, April 6th and 7th and an effort is being made to get enough to go to get an auto truck, so that we can stay through and be able to get home. Tickets go on sale March 30th and orders may be left with J. E. Fabyan at the Clapp Memorial or the Gazette office.

Coch Sidney H. Hazelden of Worcester Academy has just finished a very successful season with the swimming team, and will now turn his attention to the baseball squad. "Sid" is sure there with the baseball staff, and especially with the pitching staff. Coach Hazelden first came into the limelight as a pitcher while at Dartmouth. His work there attracted the attention of the Boston Red Sox, with which team he was given a tryout. He was the star twirler for the Norfolk club for several seasons.

Mad at Paint.

25c a gallon for paint is about $2.50 on the average job, and lots of men waited last year for that; but they didn't reckon; they got mad; wouldn't pay it.

There are times to get mad and refuse to pay; but when one's property needs protecting is no time to get mad and not paint.

Besides, it costs more to get mad and wait than to paint.

Getting mad doesn't do any good to your property; paint does it good by keeping-out water; no water and rot; and a little rot is more than enough to make a man more liberal towards his painter and paint.
